ROTTEN ROCK VEIN SUBWAY MENACE

Collapses in New Work Traced to Cause of Park Avenue Disaster of 1902.

MORE ACCIDENTS POSSIBLE

J. H. Hammond Invited to Assist Experts, Who Enforce Rigid Safety Measures.

TRAFFIC BLOCKS MODIFIED

Action of Mayor Called Absurd and Hysterical, but Reports of Friction Are Denied.

The possibility of further subway accidents similar to that of last Saturday night was pointed out yesterday by Chairman Edward E. McCall of the Public Service Commission. This is due to the "rotten" or treacherous rock which is held responsible by engineers for the collapse of the roofing over the new subway excavation at Broadway and Thirty-eighth Street, and whose irregular behavior under blasting may have had something to do with the accident last Wednesday at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street. This rotten rock is believed to run in a diagonal stratum across the central part of Manhattan Island.

It is known that the rock in the central part of Manhattan is difficult to work with, as there are hard and soft pockets through most of it. Particularly is this the case with a wide strip of Manhattan schist, a soft rock running diagonally down through the Forties and Thirties. Included in this strip is the cut at Broadway and Thirty-eighth Street, where the collapse of rock shattered the shoring Saturday night, and the section of construction about Forty-second Street, Park Avenue, and Lexington Avenue, which is the most difficult part of the new subway work in Manhattan.

The strip also is believed to include the cave-in on the eastern side of Park Avenue, between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth Streets, on March 1, 1902, when buildings at 55, 57, and 59 Park Avenue fell into the subway cut.

Known to Builders.

Major Ira A. Shaler, the contractor in charge of the section, said at that time: "We had for months been tunneling through good solid gneiss, and had no idea of the rotten rock behind the solid rock." It is pointed out also that when the idea of a crosstown subway cutting through the Murray Hill district was broached many years ago builders with experience in that region demurred on account of their knowledge of this strip of treacherous soft rock through the middle of the island.

While the cause of the Seventh Avenue accident has not been ascertained definitely, it was suggested at the time that there might have been unexpected results following an ordinary blast on account of the occurrence of pockets of hard rock in a soft strip.

Thus it is impossible, according to Chairman McCall, to say that there will be no more subway accidents. He declared yesterday that he thought the shoring in the construction work for the new subway was sufficient to withstand strain, but that there was no telling when a rock slip would make the best shoring insecure.

The workmen who were clearing up the débris at Broadway and Thirty-eighth Street had to suspend work for a time on Sunday night on account of a new break in the rock on the west side of Broadway, which started as a crack and widened rapidly. Eventually some rock fell in, but no damage was done, as the workmen were fully prepared for it. Additional shoring was put in, and it is believed that this spot is safe at present.

Hourly Inspections Made.

At the important junction at Park Avenue, Lexington Avenue and Forty-second Street, it is believed that everything should be safe, as the work here is inspected hourly, and the shoring and braces have been found satisfactory by engineers of the Public Service Commission and the Mayor's special committee, which is looking into the safety of subway work.

John Hays Hammond, one of the most famous mining engineers in the world, was invited yesterday by the Public Service Commission to come to New York as a member of the special commission of engineers which the commission is organizing, in addition to its own experts, to look over the ground and report as to what has been done and what can be done to insure greater safety. Mr. Hammond was asked to serve in place of D. C. Jacklin, whom the commission tried to reach at San Francisco, only to find that he had left Friday on his yacht for a trip to Alaska. Mr. Hammond was reached by telephone at his home at Gloucester, Mass., but said that he wanted more time to think the matter over.

The two other members of the special commission, Edmund S. Davis, chief engineer of the Boston Subways, and Henry H. Quimby, who holds a similar post in Philadelphia, will be in town today to look the grounds over and confer with the Public Service Commission.

Officials Deny Friction.

The commission and its engineers and the Mayor's committee of experts put in a hard day inspecting. Travis H. Whitney, Secretary of the commission, said many of the regulations enforced by the Mayor and Police Commissioner Woods on Sunday to keep traffic off the streets, where the cut-and-cover construction was going on, were "hysterical, unnecessary, and absurd," but it was insisted everywhere that the Mayor and the commission were working in perfect harmony. There was no conflict in the activities of the two sets of inquirers, and it was pointed out at the City Hall that some of the streets

AMERICAN SERGEANT SLAIN IN HAITI FIGHT

Another Marine Seriously Wounded—Two Battles—Fifty Natives Killed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—One American marine was killed and ten others were wounded in two clashes yesterday in Northern Haiti, between the American expeditionary force and the revolutionary Haitian cacos, or guerrillas. The marine killed was Sergeant John Platt, who lost his life in an engagement between the marines and the cacos at a point between the towns of Petit Rivière and Delarte Bonite. Ten other marines were wounded in an engagement at Haut du Cap, near Cape Haitien. The fighting was the most severe of any in which the American forces have participated since they were landed in Haiti.

In a lengthy report to the Navy Department, Admiral Caperton states that marines and mounted patrols were sent out along the roads entering these towns in Northern Haiti, to keep open the lines of transportation for the entry of food supplies. While engaged in this patrol duty the Americans were attacked by the cacos.

The list of American casualties as reported to the Navy Department follows:

Killed—Sergeant John Platt, born at Detroit. Serving his fourth enlistment in the Marine Corps; participated in the Cuban pacification, the Peking relief expedition, the Philippine insurrection, and at Vera Cruz, Mexico. Next of kin, Mrs. Susette Blanchard, North Brookfield, Mass.

Seriously wounded—Corporal George W. Strout. Re-enlisted 1912 at Brooklyn Navy Yard. Next of kin, sister, Bessie Lehr, Baltimore.

Wounded — Privates Howard P. Youngs, Charles F. Schropp, Julius Cooey, Frederick W. Remani, Goff Ellsworth Jordan, Frank J. Brandle, John Witter, Bernard C. Glassner, and Vincent Gage.

About fifty Haitians were killed in the fighting.

LAYS BORDER ATTACKS TO MEXICAN I. W. W.'S

Carranza Agent Charges That Labor Agitators Impersonate Soldiers—American Held.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Colonel Tiodulo R. Beltran, Carranzista Consul at San Antonio, Texas, will lay before the Department of Justice tomorrow information tending to show that much of the disturbance along the Mexican border is due to the activities of the Mexican branch of the Industrial Workers of the World. The local members are known as Magonistas. Most of them, according to Colonel Beltran, are engaged in railway construction work on the border. They are fanatics, he says, and believe that by making trouble intervention will be brought on and after that the land will be divided among the people.

Colonel Beltran is convinced that Carranzista soldiers are not responsible for the border clashes. Their uniform, he says, is a cheap affair, easily imitated, and the Magonistas have adopted it, he believes, to increase the international significance of their acts.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Sept. 27.—Mexicans living near Progreso Crossing have spread a story that Private Richard J. Johnson of the Twelfth Cavalry, who has been missing since last Friday's fight, was seen a prisoner on the Mexican side of the river soon after the fight. Major Edward Anderson of the Twelfth Cavalry went today to the vicinity of Progreso Crossing for further investigation of the situation there.

Two Mexican bandits who were wounded by J. B. McAllen on Friday, when his ranch was attacked, died today. Two others were killed during the fight. Another bandit from this party was captured today by Deputy Sheriffs.

POPE TELLS BISHOPS PEACE DESIRE GROWS

Termed Universal Yearning in Message to Prussian Catholic Conference at Cologne.

COLOGNE, Sept. 27, (via London.)—The Prussian Catholic Bishops attending a conference at Fulda have received the folowing message from Pope Benedict:

"In the same measure in which the need grows worse through the continuation of the war the desire for peace increases. We hope that this universal yearning may open up with every one the royal road which in patient human love leads to peace."

The Pope's message concludes with a plea for a peace which shall combine "the demands of justice with the dignity of peoples."

BIG MEAT CARGO DAMAGED.

Shipment from Here Hurt on Voyage, Naples Reports.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A Lloyd's dispatch from Naples says that the American steamship Sarnia, which sailed from New York on Sept. 3, reached Naples with her cargo of frozen meat badly damaged. It is reported that the entire cargo is unfit for consumption, the refrigerating apparatus of the vessel having broken down.

Agents of the steamship Sarnia were inclined yesterday to doubt the accuracy of the report from Naples. A dispatch from Naples, received yesterday by the agents, was as follows:

"Captain of the Sarnia fears some cargo damaged by bad weather in hold No. 3."

The Sarnia was loaded with approximately 2,000,000 pounds of meats by Morris & Co. of Chicago. The meat, it is reported, was consigned to the Italian branches of the Morris Company.

NOTES OF ALLIES AT LESS THAN 98½

Better Terms Than Expected to be Offered to Investors in Anglo-French Credit.

YIELD TO BE WELL OVER 5%

Financiers Point to Vast Income of British and French People as Security.

MAY CLOSE DEAL TOMORROW

Foreign Commissioners Will Meet the Western Bankers at Chicago Conference Today.

The Anglo-French Commission, most of whose members left for Chicago yesterday, will lay before the Western bankers terms for the $500,000,000 credit to the Allies more favorable for American investors than those which have so far figured in the public discussion of this financing.

The five-year notes convertible into fifteen-year 4½ per cent. bonds, will be offered to investors at something less than 98½, and the underwriting price will be below the 97½ figure, which has been frequently mentioned since the discussion of terms began to assume definite form. This information came from bankers who participated in the final conferences here before the departure of the Commissioners for Chicago.

The fact that the credit if finally agreed upon on the terms about to be suggested to the Western bankers will offer a higher yield to the investor than had generally been expected, and that at the same time the underwriting syndicate, participation in which is expected to be countrywide, will enter the transaction on a remunerative basis, was pointed to as affording additional reason for expecting full success to attend the proposed flotation.

Security Back of Notes.

Bankers are coming, moreover, to attach greater importance to the fact that this credit by reason of its being an external loan of Great Britain and France, the only external loan of these nations, will have back of it as security the entire taxing power of the two countries, whose revenues will be at the disposal of this external loan before they are applied to loans raised within those countries themselves. In yesterday's discussion of this point in the financial district it was pointed out that the income of the British nation, the income of all its people subject to taxation, amounts in round numbers to $12,000,000,000 a year or twenty-four times the amount of this loan.

Another fact upon which stress is laid is that the foreign investments of Great Britain are very great despite the recent sale of part of its holdings of American securities. These investments of capital abroad are estimated at between $8,000,000,000 and $10,000,000,000, yielding an annual return estimated at $400,000,000 to $500,000,000. At the larger figure one year's income on Great Britain's foreign investments alone would suffice to pay off the entire amount of the credit which is now proposed here. Bankers interested in the loan who discussed these figures yesterday found in them what they regarded as an entirely satisfactory answer to the question as to the security which will be back of the proposed loan. And French national income and foreign investments are also very great.

Bankers Lend Aid Free.

With most of the members of the commission on their way to Chicago, many of the bankers with whom they had been conferring in New York were meeting at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. to work out the details of the underwriting syndicate. Their announcement will follow immediately upon the receipt of a telegram from Chicago, which is expected to bring the information that bankers in the Middle West are in accord as to the terms provisionally arrived at before the commission's departure.

There is to be no payment for the services of the bankers in forming the syndicate. This is usually a large item in the cost of bringing out a bond issue, but J. P. Morgan & Co. and their associates have taken the stand that the price to the ultimate investor should only be enough above that to the underwriters to recompense the syndicate members.

Sir Edward H. Holden, Managing Director of the London City and Midland Bank, and the oldest member of the commission, had been indisposed in his rooms at the hotel for several days, and was not expected to make the Western trip. At the last moment he decided that he was well enough to accompany the party, the other members of which are Lord Reading, Chairman; Basil B. Blackett, Secretary, and Ernest Mallet of Paris. Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. accompanied the party, which is traveling in Mr. Morgan's private car, attached to the Twentieth Century Limited. Sir Henry B. Smith and Octave Homberg will remain in New York.

Expect Chicago's Co-operation.

How long the absentee members remain away will depend on their reception. Confidence was expressed in financial circles yesterday that the rumored opposition of important Chicago interests would quickly vanish when the Western capitalists had an opportunity to go over the situation with the Commissioners. If that is the case, Lord Reading may be able to release the announcement tonight, but it is regarded as more likely that the news will be made public on Wednesday.

With the negotiations practically completed, Wall Street was inclined yesterday to rate the new Anglo-French notes much higher as an attractive invest-

Weather Helps England Against Zeppelins, Says Member of Crew—Report of a New Raid

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 28. — The story of the recent Zeppelin raid on London is told by a member of the crew in a letter which appears in the Swiss paper, De Bund. It runs:

"Of course, London is actually beyond our range, but if we can get a steady east wind and can float a considerable distance, thus conserving our petrol, it is at once within range. Unfortunately, the weather is the best ally of those English. Either there is no wind or it is too windy, or perhaps it is bright moonlight. The beginning of the month of September was ideal. Cold nights set in, with a steady east wind.

"We took with us fewer bombs, but of a specially large size. London was the objective. The river was to be our guide from the sea. We were to conserve our petrol by floating over.

"We started very early, and by 8 had arrived over the mouth of the Thames. Owing to some clouds and the engines being silent, we were not seen, as we had expected. We were so successful that we arrived at the first bridge, called the Tower. We were to cross to the north side. Searchlights caught us here, and to lighten a ballonette we had to throw the first bomb.

"Immediately the whole sky was ablaze with light from huge projectors, and the air was rent with a terrific cannonade. The guns at first could not reach us, and we dropped bombs at regular intervals, but shortly some 'blitz' began to play around us.

"We could discern dark spots of considerable size among the general glow of light, and here we droped our 'von Bohlens,' but the searchlights hampered us more than anything. They cut off the view of our objectives.

"In spite of the blitz we got rid of our cargo, and afterward, with all our engines working and plenty of essence, we sped away for our base.

"Those English are terror-stricken by our wonderful Zeppelins. The effect must have been awful because for over half an hour we could see the glow of numerous fires in the sky.

"The English land guns are useless, and we do not mind them, but on the coast they have some better ones, and we always have to be careful in returning. In the morning they always try to intercept us from Dunkirk, but we now forestall them by taking another direction.

"The great thing is always to have plenty of essence, so that one can never run short on the return, when English taubes are about."

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 27.—Two Zeppelins flew over Northern Holland this morning, traveling in a northwesterly direction.

Both displayed the German battle flag. They were at a great height and going fast.

A few hours later one of the airships returned to its German base.

EXPLOSION ROCKS TOWN; FORTY DEAD

SHOCK SHATTERS BUILDINGS

Scores of Fires Started by Burning Oil—City Put Under Martial Law.

ARDMORE, Okla., Sept. 27.—At least forty persons were killed, and it is estimated that 200 others were injured seriously, here this afternoon when a 250-barrel tank car of gasoline exploded in the heart of the business district. The force of the explosion shook down many buildings and threw burning gasoline in every direction. A few minutes later Ardmore was at the mercy of scores of fires.

The fires were under control at 8 o'clock tonight, and the city was under martial law. Private houses immediately were thrown open to the injured. Scores of men were working tonight in the smoldering ruins along Main Street, searching for victims.

The searchers have recovered thirty-one bodies in all, and are far from the end of their task. Of the known dead twelve are negroes. The disaster caused a property loss estimated at $500,000.

Not a building on Main Street escaped damage, either as a result of the force of the explosion or of the subsequent fires. All school buildings, business houses, and residences within twelve blocks of the business district bear evidence of the explosion. Practically every window in the city was shattered.

Two workmen were busy repairing the tank car at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Suddenly one of them struck it with a hammer. A spark from the blow ignited fumes escaping through a small leak. Then there was a terrific explosion, followed by many smaller ones.

The workmen were blown to pieces. The shock shattered the Ardmore railroad station used by the Santa Fe, Frisco, and Rock Island Railroads, and the Rock Island Freight Station. Scores of other buildings quickly took fire from the flying liquid.

The flames spread rapidly until all of Main Street appeared like a roaring furnace. Thirty freight cars in the Santa Fé Railroad yards were destroyed. The pall of smoke hanging over the whole city prevented rescuers from doing effective work.

The roof of the Whittington Hotel was blown off by the force of the first explosion, but all of the guests, it is believed, escaped. At the store of Maudlin & Co. scores of girls were working, and it was feared tonight that some of them lost their lives.

There were many deeds of heroism. A woman waiting at the railroad station with a baby in her arms and a 4-year-old child at her side, ran three blocks with her clothes blazing as she ran. Passersby smothered the flames with their hands. The mother was taken to the hospital dangerously burned. The children were not seriously injured.

For four hours after the explosion Ardmore was cut off completely from the outside world. Telephone and telegraph communication was severed by the wrecking of poles in the downtown district.

ENGLAND OFFERS JOBS TO AMERICAN WORKMEN

Six Months' Contracts and Passage Both Ways for Makers of War Munitions.

Agents of British steamship lines here are engaging skilled American workers on six months' contracts for employment in the munition factories in England, passage there and return being part of the bonus offered to the men. As a condition of employment, each applicant is required to prove that he is of British descent.

Advertisements sent to the newspapers, calling for machinists, turners, fitters, coppersmiths, and plumbers, read:

"Wanted for work in Great Britain; six months' contracts; only union men of British extraction eligible. Address J. G., P. O. Box 882, New York City."

Representatives of the advertising agency through which the notices were placed said they were not authorized to give the names of the steamship companies acting for the British Government.

EXPECT LIGHT VOTE IN PRIMARIES TODAY

Moss and Perkins Both Say They Are Confident of Winning Nomination.

SOME TAMMANY CONTESTS

Queens Has Lively Fights Over County Offices—Polls in Schoolhouses for the First Time.

Candidates who are seeking party nominations at today's primaries closed their campaigns last night. There are several locally interesting Tammany district leadership fights, but no trouble is expected. The one contest of moment in Manhattan is that between Charles A. Perkins and Frank Moss for the Republican nomination for District Attorney. Both men predicted success for themselves last night.

Polls will be open from 8 to 9 P. M. Republican leaders do not look for a heavy vote in Manhattan. If no more than 15,000 enrolled Republican voters go to the polls it would not be surprising, they said. At the Republican primaries last year, when Mr. Whitman was selected as the Gubernatorial candidate over both Hihman and Hedges, 22,000 votes were polled. The vote for United States Senator was 20,000.

The only other contest of interest outside of district fights to be decided in Manhattan and the Bronx today is that between Joseph T. Ryan and Lorenz Zeller for the nomination for Judge of the City Court.

For the first time in this city public schools will be used as polling places. This was provided for by legislative enactment, and President Edward F. Boyle of the Board of Elections will watch the experiment with interest. The schools designated as polling places are as follows:

In Manhattan—Broome and Sheriff Streets, Mangin Street, north of Stanton Street.

In Brooklyn—Tillary, Bridge, and Lawrence Streets; Third Avenue, State and Schermerhorn Streets, Fifth Avenue and Ninety-second Street, Eighth Avenue and Fourteenth Street, Seventh Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street.

In the Bronx—149th Street, Union and Tinton Avenues; Prospect Avenue, Jennings Street and Ritter Place; East 196th Street at Briggs Avenue.

In Long Island City—Ninth Street and Van Alst Avenue.

In Rockaway Beach—Boulevard and Academy Avenue.

In Richmond—Prospect Avenue, New Brighton; Linoleumville.

President Boyle sent a list of the schoolhouses to Fire Commissioner Adamson and requested him to exercise particular care in regard to fire hazards, and for the first time in local political history smoking will be prohibited in a polling place.

A record vote is looked for in the primaries in Queens, where the interest is centred in the Democratic fight between Paul Stier of Ridgewood and James P. Hicks of Long Island City for the nomination for Sheriff. There are 12,392 enrolled Republicans and 42,312 enrolled Democrats in Queens, and the leaders of both parties there believe that the vote will be more than 50 per cent. of the enrollment. The Republican fight for Sheriff is between Theron Burden of Long Island City and Charles McCardell of Flushing.

PRIMARY DAY IN NEW JERSEY.

Hudson and Essex Counties Have Lively Contests On.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 27.—Factional fights in both the Democratic and Republican ranks will be decided in several counties at the primary elections to be held tomorrow throughout the State. There are no State offices to be filled at the approaching election, but the local option question has been injected into the campaign by some of the candidates for nomination to the Assembly and State Senate.

In Essex County Mayor Thomas L. Raymond, of Newark, with the support of independent Republicans and former Progressives is leading a vigorous opposition to the candidates supported by the regular Republican organization. In Hudson County the issue is between Naval Officer Wittpenn and his opponents for the Democratic nomination. In Passaic County ex-Assemblyman James Blauvelt, a former Progressive leader, is making a fight for the nomination for State Senator against Thomas F. McCran, former speaker of the House of Assembly. Blauvelt is espousing the local option cause.

Wilson Coming Home to Vote.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—President Wilson will go to Princeton, N. J., tomorrow to vote at primaries for the New Jersey Legislature. He will return to Washington in time to address the Grand Army of the Republic encampment tomorrow night.

GREAT ALLIED OFFENSIVE CONTINUES; TOTAL GERMAN LOSSES PUT AT 40,000; CROWN PRINCE'S COUNTERDRIVE FAILS

Berlin Says the Drive Has Already Failed; Calls German Line of Defense Impregnable

BERLIN, Tuesday, Sept. 28, (Via London.)—The Berlin newspapers are devoting much space to the "great offensive" in the West. The tone of the comment is one of satisfaction that the long expected attack has finally begun, and there is complete confidence regarding the outcome.

The Lokal Anzeiger reproduces the views held in official quarters, where this offensive is regarded as having already failed. It is also pointed out officially that the necessary reserves have been brought up in time at the threatened points, and that there is no prospect of the Anglo-French forces breaking the German lines.

It is added that the French and British suffered heavy losses, especially the latter at Loos, and that not the slightest ground for anxiety exists regarding further developments. German officials expect that the attacks will continue to be violent in character for several days, but they assert that the breaking of the German lines can already be set down as an impossibility.

The Kreuzzeitung says:

"Regarding the French and British reported successes, they are without significance from a military point of view. They bring the enemy no nearer to his object of breaking the German lines. Perhaps it is even more remote than ever, now that the advantage of surprise on the first attack is lost to the enemy. Those who have been fighting in the West are all confident that no breach is possible."

RUSSIANS HURL HINDENBURG BACK

His Long and Desperate Efforts to Take Dvinsk and Vileika Fail.

REFORMS FOR NEW ATTACK

Great Battle in Volhynia Fortress Region Continues, with Both Sides Claiming Success.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 27, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Dvinsk is still the centre of most important events. The reason for the comparative lull noticed here lies in the fact that the enemy is busy with a new regrouping for a great blow which is to be delivered. Also the Germans await new munitions, the shortage being due to lavish expenditure in former hurricane assaults.

Separate engagements on this front are favorable to the Russians, who in occupying the fortified village of Driviaty have gained important commanding positions. The Germans have been thrown back to the place occupied when they started their violent assaults. Still more important is the failure of the German attacks on Vileika. After their repulse here, with the loss of artillery and thousands of prisoners, the Germans, recognizing the importance of the position for the protection of General Eichhorn's left flank, made a strong endeavor to reoccupy Vileika. They attacked simultaneously on both flanks and in front, but without result.

Besides holding Vileika, the Russians dislodged the Germans from the surrounding fortified villages. The junction at Molodechino is also in Russian hands.

All together the lastest battles on the Russian frontier have been marked by the utmost fierceness. The stubborn fighting was mostly ended in bayonet charges.

Both Armies Exhausted.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 27.—The German aggressive on the eastern front has become noticeably weaker during the last few days. With the increasing extent of their penetration of Russian territory, the impetuous strides with which the Germans for a time made fast headway against the Russians, carrying everything before them, have been gradually shortening up.

At the same time the Russian opposition, with the replenishment of the army's military supplies, is growing daily more stubborn, and resort is being had to bayonet attacks, with apparently all the confidence and vigor that carried the Russian arms last Winter to the crests of the Carpathians.

The efforts made to trap the Russian armies retreating from Vilna failed, as did the similar efforts made last Summer after the taking of Warsaw, notwithstanding that the opportunity for success in the Vilna region appeared much more promising. The assaults upon Dvinsk have been checked by the brilliant defense of General Ruzsky, and the operations here have come to a temporary standstill due to the exhaustion of both combatants after days of battling.

"Somewhat quieter" is the comment of the Russian General Staff on the situation around Dvinsk, but it is pointed out that this is not intended to minimize the importance of these operations. The calm does not mean their complete stoppage. German attacks continue at various points. During the last few days their greatest efforts have been made in the vicinity of Lake Drisitiata, directly south of Dvinsk, where General Ruzsky threw them back from the town of that name.

The Russian Staff has information that the Germans have undertaken a new grouping of their forces for an extensive flanking operation from the direction of Novo Grodek, southeast toward Nesvige and Slutsk, on the highway to Borbrysk, the principal crossing of the great Beresina between Borizow and the junction of the Beresina with the Dnieper. This region is comparatively unincumbered with marshes and forests, and offers a favorable terrain for such maneuvres.

East of Vilna stubborn battles are ra-

Twenty Merchant Vessels to be Fitted as Troop Transports—Allies' Offer of Aid Welcomed.

ATHENS, Sept. 27.—The Ministers of the allied powers last night formally notified the Greek Government that their countries were ready in case of attack on Serbia and Greece, or either, to land immediately a force amply equipped with artillery and other services. That force will be kept up to strength and reinforced as circumstances dictate.

The Ministers of the allied nations also informed the Greek Government that the Allies would furnish all necessary financial assistance immediately. The news of this action has given great satisfaction throughout the country.

For the moment, then, attention in the Balkan situation must move from Greece, where matters may now, I think, be regarded as in order, to Rumania. The position of Rumania becomes the one of paramount importance, and there the Germans are putting forth all their strength in order to bring the Bucharest Government to their side.

Germany's aim now is to force Rumania to side with her, and so allow troops and munitions to go through to Bulgaria, across which country they would be permitted to pass.

Rumania to Stand Pat.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 27.—The Rumanian Cabinet, at a meeting today in which the mobilization of Bulgaria and Greece was discussed, decided that Rumania should continue the course she has been following.

These new developments, it was determined, were not of a nature to cause Rumania to modify in any way the line of conduct she has pursued up to the present. Consequently Rumanian troops will remain concentrated along the national frontiers.

The Cabinet did not consider the question of establishing martial law.

ROME, Sept. 26, via Paris, Sept. 27.—The Turin correspondent of the Idea Nazionale says he has been informed that the Rumanian Government has sent to Sofia a note couched in friendly language asking an explanation of Bulgaria's military preparations.

Greece Requisitions 20 Ships.

PIRAEUS, Greece, Sunday, Sept. 26, via Paris, Sept. 27.—The Greek Government today requisitioned twenty merchant vessels for the transportation of troops, among them the transatlantic liners Themistocles, King Constantine and Patria.

CARDIFF, Wales, Sept. 27. — The Greek Consul here has received telegraphic instructions from his Government that all unloaded Greek steamers at Cardiff, Barry, and Penarth must proceed to Piraeus immediately. A dozen steamers are affected.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Mobilization of twenty classes of Greek troops will call to the colors 400,000 men. This is the official figures given by the Greek War Ministry yesterday, as forwarded by the Athens correspondent of the Havas News Agency. The War Ministry states that there is an abundance of equipment and munitions for these men.

The correspondent adds it is unknown whether King Constantine will take active command of his forces. If he does not do so his brother, Prince Nicholas, will be placed in command.

Number of Prisoners Swollen to 23,000, Including 353 Officers—Germans Took 7,000.

LILLE SAFE, BERLIN SAYS

Reports British Assaults to the Southwest Repulsed with Loss and the Offensive Broken.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The great offensive of the French and British forces against both sides of the elbow joint of the German positions on the western front has not slackened. No new outstanding success is reported, but, on counting up the results of the two days' fighting, the Allies find that their success has been greater than earlier accounts indicated.

It is estimated that the prisoners captured by the Allies during the rush will reach a total of more than 23,000, but this is offset to some extent by the German claims that nearly 7,000 French and British fell into their hands. French military critics reckon the total losses of the Germans, including killed and wounded, at 40,000. The Germans are reported to have lost more than seventy cannon, of which the French night report credits twenty-three to the British.

According to Paris official advices, a violent German offensive in the Argonne has come to nothing.

The British official statement told briefly of heavy losses inflicted on the Germans northwest of Hulluch, where heavy German counterattacks were carried out during the course of the day.

Berlin maintains that by means of counterattacks the allied drives have been checked with heavy loss, but as the Germans make no claims of having recovered the ground taken from them, the indications are that the allied gains on Saturday and Sunday have been generally maintained, and at some points improved, and that the fighting has reached a stage of vicious attack and counterattack which may persist for weeks.

Lacking further news of the great battle, England is awaiting developments with an eagerness not equaled since the critical days when the Germans fell back from the gates of Paris. In the meantime the public is warned to expect heavy losses, and it is suggested that the Germans, already 2,000,000 strong from the coast to the Swiss frontier, may throw reinforcements into the line for a struggle the like of which even this bloody war has not yet seen.

Optimists are also reminded that the Germans are likely to put the most dependence on their second and third line defenses, relying upon machine guns and comparatively few men to hold the front line, which means that a difficult task is before the Allies.

Following is the night report of the French War Office:

To the north of Arras the situation is without modification. The enemy has reacted only feebly against the new positions occupied by our troops. The number of prisoners taken in that region exceeds 1,500.

In Champagne the battle continues without cessation. Our troops are at present on a front taken before the second position of the German defense, marked by Hill 185, to the west of the Navarrin farm, the Souain hillock, the tree of Hill 198 and the village and hillock of Tahure.

The number of cannon captured from the enemy has not yet been computed, but exceeds seventy field guns and heavy pieces, of which twenty-three were captured by the British Army.

The Germans undertook today in the Argonne an offensive movement, which was completely stopped. On four occasions they attempted an infantry assault on our positions at La Fille Morte after having violently bombarded them with projectiles of heavy calibre and suffocating shells. The enemy was able to reach only a few points of our trench along the whole of the first line. He was stopped there by the fire from our supporting trenches and has been repulsed elsewhere with very heavy losses.

There is nothing of importance to report on the rest of the front.

British Captured Eighteen Cannon.

The British official communication made public tonight says:

Northwest of Hulluch we have repulsed a number of counterattacks and inflicted heavy loss on the enemy. East of Loos our offensive is making progress.

Our captures now amount to fifty-three officers and 3,400 men, and eighteen guns and fifteen machine guns. The enemy abandoned a considerable quantity of material, which has not yet been classified.

French Artois Positions Maintained.

The text of the Paris afternoon communication follows:

In the Artois district we have maintained our positions.

To the east of Souchez our advance, previously reported as having reached the destroyed telegraph line to the north of Thelus, has not as a matter of fact passed the orchards of La Folie and the highway from Arras to Lille. This advance, however, has been at all points maintained.

Along the front to the south of the River Somme there has been fighting with bombs and torpedoes in the vicinity of Andéchy. Our artillery has vigorously counterattacked the batteries of the enemy which were cannonading our positions at Quennevières.

In the Champagne district the fighting has been going on with tenacity along all the front. We have occupied at several places, notably at Trou Bricot, to the north of the Wacques farm, several positions in the rear of our new lines, where certain detachments of the enemy had been able to maintain themselves.

The previous statement that we had captured 200 German officers is erroneous; we have taken prisoner 300 German officers in the Champagne district.

Between the Meuse and the Moselle and in the Lorraine district there has been severe artillery fighting on both sides.

A violent storm in the Vosges has for the moment suspended all operations in this district.

Lille Offensive Stopped, Berlin Says.

This is the account of the day's fighting issued by the German War Office:

Quiet reigned on the coast. Only a few shots were fired on the environs of Middelkerke by vessels of the enemy which were lying in the far distance, and these were without result.

The enemy has not repeated his attacks in the Ypres sector.

Southwest of Lille the great enemy offensive has been brought to a standstill by a counterattack. Fierce separate attacks by the enemy north and south of Loos broke down, with very heavy losses to the British. In the region of Souchez, also, and on both sides of Arras, all attacks were repulsed with sanguinary losses. The number of prisoners has been increased to 25 officers and 2,600 men. The booty in machine guns has been increased to 14.

The French offensive between Rheims and the Argonne has made no further progress. All attacks of the enemy, which were very fierce, especially on the Somme-Py road, well north of Beauséjour, at Fermemaisons and east of the Aisne, failed with very heavy losses to the enemy.

The number of prisoners taken there has been increased to more than 40 officers and 3,900 men.

Three enemy aeroplanes, including one French super-battle aeroplane, were shot down yesterday in aerial battles northeast of Ypres, southwest of Lille, and in Champagne. Two more enemy flying machines were brought down southwest of Lille, and in Champagne aviators of the enemy dropped bombs on the town of Peronne, where two women and two children were killed and many other inhabitants were wounded seriously.

Belgians' Air Raid Successful.

The Belgian official communication issued today reads as follows:

During the night of Sept. 26 and 27 there was a light bombardment of our advanced posts.

Our aviators have successfully bombarded, under a violent artillery, infantry, and machine-gun fire, the enemy cantonments at Clercken, Eessen ,and Keyem, and the encampments at Traet Bosch, causing at that point fierce fires.

Today there was a violent bombardment of Ramscapelle and a bombardment of some of our advanced posts at Oostkerke and trenches to the south of Dixmude.

FRENCH WON TRENCHES IN TWENTY MINUTES

Bayonets Did Most of the Execution in the Furious Champagne Assaults.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Reports from the front say that only twenty minutes was required for the French infantry to complete the victory prepared for by sixty hours of violent shelling, and overrun the first line of the German trenches north of Perthes, in Champagne. While awaiting the moment for the attack the French soldiers rested behind their lines, joking and putting their arms in perfect order.

The bright glow from the slow-burning illuminating rockets and the glare of exploding projectiles lighted up the entire zone of action during two nights.

"After a few hours of intense fire, our hopes that our batteries were dominating the situation were transformed to certain conviction," says a wounded officer who took part in the battle. "The moment for the attack was set for dawn, when the charge was sounded. Whole battalions, reinforced by reserves, bounded forward. The rush was so impetuous that the Germans still alive and unwounded in the battered works, seemed dazed and unable to resist. They were disarmed and pushed back for our reserves to pick up, while the attacking line went on.

"There was little or no musketry; the bayonet did most of the work. The proportion of dead to wounded and prisoners was large. What was left of entire companies threw up their hands at the sight of the deadly execution by the Zouaves."

The general impression of wounded men brought from the field is that the affair of Perthes is only a beginning of the French effort.

Military critics estimate that the German killed and wounded in the battle of the last two days in the Artois and Champagne regions must easily equal the number of prisoners taken. Hence they reckon the German total losses at not less than 40,000, equaling the size of an army corps.

GERMANS SPIRITLESS, BRITISH OFFICER SAYS

Surrendered Readily When Their Trenches Were Rushed With the Bayonet.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 28. — The first of the wounded from the victory in Flanders reached London last night. One of their number, an officer with shrapnel wounds in head and shoulder, talking of the action to The Daily Mail representative, said:

"Things are beginning to hum at last. On Friday it really began. We had the usual dose of heovies all day. On Saturday morning early, under cover of our artillery, the move-up started with short, sharp rushes. The German trenches were at a distance of about 400 yards.

"Our fellows went at it with rare spirit. There was some pretty business with the bayonet, and prisoners, plenty of them, with their 'kamerad' cries and very ready to throw down rifles and all in their eagerness to be captured. That was the most surprising thing of the whole business. Many of them were old men of the Landsturm and Landwehr, but there was plenty of young blood among them as well. They seemed crushed and exhausted—no go in them—and seemed to welcome the chance of surrender. They were practically dead beat, with nothing but 'kamerad' or some such phrase to say.

"I got winged shortly after reaching the first line. Everything is going top hole. The boys are splendid and as game as bantem cocks."

GERMANS AT SOUAIN IN PERIL.

French Only Three Miles from Their Line of Communications.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—A great sigh of relief went up when this afternoon's bulletin announced that the gains in the Souain (Champagne) region had not only been held, but somewhat extended. The hardest fighting here seems to have taken place near the village of Auberive, about eighteen miles north of Châlons and the same distance east of Rheims.

The Germans in Champagne are peculiarly dependent upon the cross line of railway from Argonne to Bazancourt, which unites Rethel and Vouziers, the line by which alone they can bring up large and rapid supplies of reinforcements. At Auberive the French are now only three miles from this line, which also maintains the Germans' connections with the hills to the north of Rheims.

A break through at this point would be a serious matter for General von Fabeck. Here, therefore, there will be absolute need of immediate and heavy reinforcements and, as the whole of the long line is still being tried, it will not be easy to spare them from any other part. This dependence of one region upon another must always be remembered.

In March on this front, at Mesnil and Beausejour, the French attack, as it was afterward officially stated, compelled the Germans to bring more than a division of their best troops from the British front in the North, and so greatly contributed to Sir John French's advance at Neuve Chapelle, as well as to the Russian defense.

RIDICULES 'SURPRISE' THEORY.

London Telegraph Says Germans Had Ample Warning of Attack.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 28.—The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial today dealing with the question of there being a "surprise" in the Allies' attack on the Germans in France, argues that nobody supposes that the German intelligence service is inadequate, and asserts that, as the Allies' attack had been prepared for by artillery for several weeks, there could have been no element of surprise in it.

"What are we to make," says The Daily Telegraph, "of the astounding fact that so many thousands of unwounded Germans were captured, to say nothing of the wounded not yet enumerated, and of the capture of 300 unwounded officers in Champagne alone. It is plain on the face of the meagre body of facts yet published that something very remarkable, and certainly without precedent in this war, took place in the attack on the Champagne front, if not elsewhere."

The Daily Telegraph urges the authorities to let the nation know the facts of the situation at the earliest possible moment.

KAISER TO SHIFT TO THE WEST

Will Establish Headquarters in Luxemburg, a Berlin Report Says.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Emperor William intends to remove his headquarters to Luxemburg in October, it is asserted in a dispatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company. Instructions already have been issued regarding the transfer, according to advices from Berlin, the dispatch adds.

The Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, through which German troops passed on their way to the attack on the French at the outbreak of the war, is close to the fighting line at a crucial point on the western front. The Clt yof Luxemburg, the capital of the Grand Duchy, is hardly more than fifty miles in a direct line from Verdun, at which the armies of the German Crown Prince have been driving at intervals for many months.

PEAT AND STRAW FODDER.

Also, Germany Turns to Vines and Nettles for Spinning.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 27, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—It is reported from Berlin that a concern has been formed there to try to find new materials for foddder, either through the adaptation of peat or the increased use of straw and root tops. The dearth of imports of fodder is severely felt, and chopped straw has been gradually resorted to for feeding horses. The making of straw flour has largely increased. The dry Summer has made the straw harvest exceedingly poor in some places, and the fixing of maximum prices for this commodity is expected soon.

On the initiative of the Minister of War an organization also has been formed for obtaining substitutes for spinning materials. The people are requested to gather hop vines, nettles and other suitable plants, which will be bought by the Government for the textile industries.

The price of meat is constantly rising.

FLOUR GOES TO ALBANIA.

Sailing Ship Will Carry Cargo for War Sufferers Today.

The sailing ship Albania will leave this port for Avlona, Albania, today with a cargo of flour for the relief of the starving people of Albania. William Willard Howard, Secretary of the Albanian Relief Fund, will sail on the Albania and will personally supervise the distribution of the flour.

The cargo has been contributed by the Committee of Mercy, the Ohio Commission for the Relief of European War Sufferers, and the Albanian Relief Fund. The Italian Government has issued instructions for the safe passage of the Albania through the blockaded waters of the Adriatic.

LONG IGNORANT OF WAR.

Bernier, Arctic Explorer, a Year Behind History.

QUEBEC, Sept. 27.—Captain Joseph Bernier, the Canadian arctic explorer, has reached port on his vessel, the Guide, after a successful trip to the new land known as Baffin Island, which, in 1916, will be recognized as a Canadian possession.

Captain Bernier and his crew set sail for the north on July 4, 1914, and it was not until the receipt of letters and papers a month ago that the Captain and his crew were informed of the European war.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK.

The Natal Transport Shelled by Submarines—Her Crew Saved.

MARSEILLES, France, Sept. 27.—The British steamer Natal Transport was shelled and sunk by a German submarine Sept. 17, south of Crete. Its crew of thirty-four was picked up and landed at Piraeus, Greece. The sailors were taken from there to Malta by the Messageries Maritimes liner Memphis, which arrived here yesterday.

The Natal Transport was a steamer of 2,655 tons net. She was last reported to have arrived at Port Said on July 15.

ROUNDING UP MORE ALIENS.

One Thousand Teutons and Turks in London Are Affected.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The round-up of male Germans, Austrians, and Turks of military age in London, which had been set for today, was carried out by the local police, beginning with this morning, and will be completed by tomorrow.

About 1,000 men are affected, some of whom hold responsible positions.

London Shows Quiet Satisfaction Over the Victory—Stocks Advance.

AERIAL PARADE OVER PARIS

120 Aeroplanes Celebrate Successes —Theatre Audiences Sing "La Marseillaise."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 28.—The London public has taken the good news from France with a calmness which argues a correct appreciation of military values. Generally speaking, the successes gained so far are regarded as better than could have been expected. It was rumored in London at the end of last week that big movements were afoot, and the news from the front was awaited with considerable anxiety, which is now turned to quiet confidence.

The Westminster Gazette struck the prevailing note when it remarked: "The least that can be said of the operations is that they demonstrate the possibility of things which even the stoutest hearted had begun to think impossible." The Stock Exchange showed a general advance in prices and the members displayed a restrained cheerfulness. The population has shown no indication of an undue desire to celebrate the victories, but there is ample evidence of what an American who has been in London for the last three months summed up as electricity in the air.

Paris is Joyous, but Undemonstrative.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The heart of Paris is almost bursting with joy today. Yet, even while reading the communiqués of the past two days with the confidence that they are only the beginning of good news, the city is outwardly almost as stoical as at any time since the war began. Still, in every eye, there is a joyous gleam; every face expresses the most exalted satisfaction, and the belief that the long months of waiting, hoping, and praying are almost over.

The calm of the city amazes everyone. Various explanations are offered. One man of prominence expressed the opinion to me that it was "the result of over-civilization," which he regretted, in as much as he believed that the population should openly rejoice at beating its enemies. But the majority—from high officials to humble garçons de café—all say it is too early for cheers.

"Yes," they say, "this is really our great offensive that some believed would never, never come; but we must still wait. We must not really cheer until the Germans are out of France."

On all sides one hears remarks concerning the realization of the prediction I was allowed to send THE NEW YORK TIMES after my last trip to the front, which was printed here, to the effect that "the Kaiser said a year ago that he would take Paris before the leaves fell. This year the French reply comes before the leaves are red."

There was despondency prior to yesterday's good news, on account of the threatened Bulgarian coup. Today, sitting on a boulevard terrasse, I heard a man say: "I wonder what King Ferdinand thinks now." The reply was: "He is probably waiting for the next French communiqué. If it is as good as today's I shall not be surprised to hear that he really mobilized to march against the Turks."

Fortunately, on my last trip to the front I passed over the portion of the Champagne country where the battle is now raging. I am still absolutely prohibited from mentioning anything I saw then concerning the general offensive, so I shall not attempt to explain the new methods of overcoming fortified trenches and shall not undertake to tell how the new heavy guns which had been signaling a general offensive with increasing fury for a fortnight have been able to operate so close to the lines; nor shall I describe how the cavalry came into its own again; nor how French ingenuity has permitted the passage of troops over acres of barbed wire as though the entanglements did not exist. But I hope I can say that I passed on that trip that this would be the section where General Joffre would strike his heaviest with the battering ram he had been welding so patiently, so slowly, and so indifferently to the suggestions of the "hurry-ups" all the Summer months.

That Joffre outguessed the Germans is shown by the fact that a few days before the attack a facetious German in an aeroplane dropped messages over the French lines which read: "Don't try to be clever; we know the date you propose to attack." The messages, however, were dropped over a part of the line where an attack had not been planned. The Crown Prince chose the same date for his offensive in that uarter, which reliable reports assert was easily repulsed.

The champagne country, where the French are advancing, is as different from the fat valleys of the Marne as Winter is from June. It is the most desolate-looking country in France, being nothing by chalky steppes. There are no villages of more than a few hundred inhabitants in the entire section. The country reminded me of a rolling sea on a gloomy day, with breakers away off on the horion, which were German trenches, white against the sky on account of earthworks and sacks covered with chalk. The vegetation was extremely sparse—what little there was so beaten by artillery that it reminded me of a beard several days old. I understand that the attack began in a downpour of rain that would intensify the general mournfulness of the scene.

There is no doubt that the attacks of the last few days are only the beginning; that we may expect, unless all signs completely fail, an increasing pressure for the next four weeks. The French arrangements, both in Champagne and Artois, are perfection to the last detail; so that when the climax of the offensive is reached the Paris populace may permit itself some cheers.

But, as tonight's Temps says: "At this hour, more than ever, the thoughts of the entire nation are with its soldiers, because it is their bravery that is making the greatness of the new country after the victory."

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Parisians received the news of the allied victory soberly. The newspapers issued unusually large editions, and official bulletins were read from the stages of the theatres last night, the orchestras playing the "Marseillaise." There were no other general demonstrations.

A report was spread that many trains carrying wounded soldiers were arriving outside Paris, but later it was learned that these trains were filled with German prisoners.

At one point in the environs of Paris yesterday 120 aeroplanes went into the air in a spontaneous demonstration of joy over the victories for the arms of the Allies in the north and east. The point from which they rose is one of the railway transfer stations of the Paris belt line, and the arrival of ten trainloads of German prisoners brought the first indication of the successes.

One airman after another rose, waving the tricolor, until 120 machines were manoeuvring.

Parisians who had heard that German prisoners were passing through the suburb went there in considerable numbers today in the hope of seeing them as they went by. The excursionists brought camp stools, lunch baskets, and opera glasses with them. The best observation point was the railway bridge, and here the thickest of the expectant crowds assembled. The only prisoners seen all day, however, were three who belonged to a detachment which had been kept at the point for some time, but the sightseers were fortunate enough to witness the passing of a trainload of captured machine guns.

Orders have been given to send prisoners from the front only at night.

ARMENIAN ATROCITIES SCOUTED BY BERNSTORFF

Calls Reports "Pure Inventions" —Says the Catholicos Wrote Under Pressure.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—The German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, in a letter made public here today, declared that the reports concerning alleged atrocities in the Ottoman Empire were "pure inventions." The Ambassador's letter, written under date of Sept. 23 and addressed to Miran Sevasly of this city, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Defense Union of America, who asked for a definite statement, was as follows:

In reply to your letter I beg to inform you that, according to recent official and authentic reports received by the German Government and transmitted by this embassy to the Government of the United States, the alleged atrocities committed in the Ottoman Empire appear to be pure inventions.

Without doubting the good faith of the Catholicos, I beg, however, to call your attention to the fact that his Holiness is writing under pressure of the Russian censure. Yours very truly,

J. BERNSTORFF.

The reference to the Catholicos, or Primate of the Armenian Church, was based on a report recently published, in which he declared that the extermination of the Armenian race throughout Turkey was being carried on under official direction by an organized system of pillage, deportations, wholesale executions, and massacres.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople was today instructed to inquire into reported outrages against Armenians in Turkey and to ascertain if any victims are American citizens by birth or naturalization.

So far nothing has been received from the embassy at Constantinople to indicate that American citizens have suffered, but American mission property has been taxed and threatened with confiscation. The report of the murder of two American missionaries is still unconfirmed.

TURKS EXPELLING PRIESTS.

Sending All the Catholic Clergy from Constantinople.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A Sofia dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"According to private advices from Constantinople, the Turks are expelling all Catholic priests from that city."

AUSTRIA ACCUSES ITALIANS.

Official Statement Says They Fired On Red Cross Hospital.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.)—The official statement issued yesterday at Vienna contains the following:

"The activity of the Italians yesterday was confined to heavy shelling of the Red Cross Hospital at Gorizia, which is marked conspicuously by the Red Cross flag. Italian shells struck the hospital five times. One shell exploded in the operating room. Fifty-three other shells fell in the immediate neighborhood of the hospital.

"This action was contrary to international law. It served no military purpose, as there were no troops in that immediate vicinity."

The Austrian official statement of Sunday as received by way of London did not contain the foregoing, which apparently was stricken out by the British censor.

VIENNA, Sept. 27, (via London.)—The following report of the operations on the Italian frontier was issued tonight by the Austrian War Office:

"In the Italian war theatre the situation is unchanged. Attempts by the enemy to approach our positions on Montepiano were repulsed. On the northern border of the plateau of Doberdo an attack by a detachment of Bersglieri failed before our entanglements."

ROME, Sept. 27.—An official statement from the General Headquarters of the Italian Army, dated Sept. 27, says:

"Small engagements were fought on the day of the 26th at Dosso Casina, on the southern slopes of Monte Altissimo, (Monte Baldo,) at Malga Secondo posts in the Morte Coston zone, on the slopes of Monte Rombon, (Prezo and Potoge,) and on Monte Nero. In every case the enemy were repulsed, leaving a number of prisoners in our hands.

"In the Piezzo basin our artillery dispersed an enemy column which was descending the valley of Koritnica and bombarded enemy working parties on Monte Romson, forcing them to scatter.

"On the Carso, on the extreme left wing of the portion we occupy, our infantry surprised the enemy and made notable progress in the direction of Peteano, entrenching themselves in the positions that they won."

RUMANIA DEAF TO GERMAN URGING

NO ENTENTE WITH GERMANY.

Bulgarian Premier Quoted as Saying So—Friendly to British.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 28.—Constantine Stephanove, Professor of English at the University of Sofia, who is at present on a mission in this country to explain the position taken up with regard to the war by Bulgaria, has communicated his ideas to a representative of The Morning Post. Stephanove said:

"Before leaving for England I had a long conversation with Premier Radoslavoff, who had been informed of my intended journey, and he said:

"'You can tell the English people that Bulgarians entertain toward them the very friendliest feelings. Between the two nations there is an historical bond of sympathy. We on our part do not forget that in the past England has been the champion of Bulgarian unity and Bulgarian independence.'

"I ventured to ask what I should say to my English friends supposing they seemed to think that even if the entente powers agreed to the realization of Bulgarian ideals Bulgaria would still be powerless to help them, because of some supposed understanding with the central European powers, whereupon he said:

"'Tell your English friends that if the Entent powers pledge themselves to satisfy our sacred wishes and legitimate claims we shall at once throw in our lot with them. That is my policy, and even if it were not I could not do otherwise. If I did there would at once be such an outburst of popular feeling that no Government could stand against it.'

"I then asked him whether there was any truth in rumors to the effect that Bulgaria had entered into certain obligations toward the Central powers, and he replied:

"'None whatever, either with the Central Powers or with Turkey. My aim for the present is to remain neutral as far as I possibly can until the time comes when the realization of Bulgarian ideals compels me to take action.'

M. Stephanuove added:

"At the worst Bulgaria will remain neutral. Never will she throw in her lot with the Teutonic powers against her old friend England."

TURKS ARE USING DOGS AS SCOUTS

Let Them Loose at Night Against French Patrols, Who Shoot Them.

RAID BY BRITISH AIRCRAFT

A Hangar Destroyed and Shipping Damaged—Turks Claim Success in Gallipoli Operations.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A British official communication says:

"The recent operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula have been confined mainly to attacks from either side by aircraft, to bombardments by artillery, and to mining.

"On one occasion the Turks opened a heavy artillery fire along our front at Suvla and Anzac, which appeared to be the prelude to a general attack. It was followed by an attack by a small force only on the right centre at Suvla. The enemy was easily dispersed by our rifle fire. Twice subsequently much the same thing happened.

"More than once enemy aeroplanes have attacked our aircraft base, but the bombs dropped did no damage. In return our aeroplanes counterattacked with bombs and blotted out a hangar and did some damage among the shipping at Burgaz.

"During the night of the 24th the Turks let loose watchdogs against the French patrols. The dogs were all shot."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 27, (via Berlin, by wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.)—Part of the positions on the Turkish left wing at Anafarta which had been occupied by the Entente Allies in the Gallipoli Peninsula operations has been retaken by the Turks, according to an official statement issued at Turkish Army Headquarters today.

According to an English official who arrived in New York yesterday from the Dardanelles on his way to Ottawa, the Allies are confident that the strait will be forced and Constantinople captured before November.

ALLOW STILL MORE BREAD.

German Children Get Additional Pound a Week—Appeal for Poland.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—"The bread rations in Berlin have been increased again," says the Overseas News Agency. "Children between 9 and 11 years will be allowed one pound a week more.

"The Catholic Diocese of Cracow will observe Nov. 21 as a day for prayer and the collection of money for the destitute of Poland. The Polish clergy have appealed to Roman Catholics of the world to assist persons in the region devastated by the Russians."

CONCEALED THEFT FOR YEAR

Friend Betrayed Clerk Who Admits He Stole $1,369 Payroll.

Regarded for five years as one of the most trusted employes in the big silk house of Peirel Buhler & Co. of 260 Fourth Avenue, Henry Schneider, 21 years old, of 454 Forty-second Street, Brooklyn, yesterday confessed that he had robbed his employers on Oct. 16, 1914, of $1,369.60. He had since spent all the money on girls and frivolities. A fellow-employe told of the thefts.

After his confession Schneider was taken before Judge Malone, in General Sessions, and held in $3,000 bail. Schneider also confessed that he had stolen two gold watches from a Mr. Wuest, a member of the silk firm, two years ago.

ing in the region of Vileika, where the Germans have succeeded in advancing northward of Vileika to the eastward of the railway running from Molodechno to Vileika and Polotsk. Battles are also progressing southwest of Vileika, but the latter point and Molodechno junction still remain in Russian hands.

From Lida and the Gawia River the Germans have succeeded in moving eastward to the village of Idie, where they brought heavy artillery into action. This is a step to the progress of the Russians toward the village of Podgurie.

By intensive operations there the Teutons evidently are trying to flank the forested region between the Niemen affluents. Simultaneously they are continuing their movement southeastward from Novo Grodek in the direction of Nessvige and Slutsk in an endeavor to reach the highway from Slutsk to Bobrysk, as a movement directly at Minsk from the right bank of the Niemen from Podgurie, as well as from Nesterka, would bend the front considerably and might expose the German armies to attacks on their rear or their flank.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 28.—Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says it is reported from the southern front that the Russians have reached Kovel, and that the Austrians have evacuated Brody. During the retreat the Austrians threw a great quantity of supplies into the River Styr.

OFFICIAL WAR BULLETINS.

Austrians Say Russian Offensive in Volhynia Has Been Broken.

VIENNA, Sept. 27, (via London.)—The following official communication from General Headquarters was issued tonight:

As in East Galicia and the Ikwa region, the Russian counteroffensive has been broken in the Volhynian Fortress region. Yesterday the enemy evacuated positions northwest of Dubno and in the Styr section near Lutsk and fell back in an easterly direction. The bridgehead east of Lutsk is again in our hands.

On our front south of Dubno there have been local skirmishes and artillery firing.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (via London.)—The following official report of the operations on the Russian front was issued today:

Eastern theatre of war:

Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: In the Gulf of Riga, Russian men of war, including one ship of the line, were attacked by German aviators. Hits were observed on the line ship and on a torpedo boat destroyer. The Russian fleet steamed away in a northerly direction as quickly as possible.

On the southwestern front of Dvinsk another position was captured from the enemy yesterday. Nine officers and more than 1,300 men were taken prisoner, and two machine guns wore captured.

West of Vileika our attack continued. South of Smorgen we repulsed strong counterattacks of the enemy. Our troops made progress between Krewo and Wischnew. The right wing of this army and the army of Prince Leopold have reached the western bank of the Niemen at Schtscherasi. Serwetsch and the Szozara have been cleared of the enemy. East of Baranovichi the enemy still holds some small bridgeheads. Fighting continues along the entire front.

"The Russians, taking advantage of their intimate knowledge of the country, led the enemy to the marshy ground, where they surrounded him on three sides, exterminating or capturing three complete infantry companies and taking much booty."

NORWEGIANS HUNGRY, BUT PILING UP GOLD

Scarcity of Food Alarms the Nation and Prices Soar, While Banks Gain Millions in Deposits.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Sept. 8, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Something very close to a panic is spreading over Norway and Sweden, as a result of the alarming scarcity of provisions and the unprecedented prices which are demanded for the simplest kind of food. Norway is on the point of following Sweden's lead in prohibiting the export of all provisions.

The advance in prices in Norway is approximately the same as in Sweden, but in some cases it has been even more marked. Herring, which is one of the main articles of food among the peasant population, are from 2 to 4½ and 5 cents apiece, and the price of oatmeal is 250 per cent. higher than it was before the war. Meat prices have reached the highest level ever known in Norway.

However, Norway's economic and financial condition is better than before the war. Norway's tremendous exports, while they have drained the country of necessary provisions for home consumption and carried masses of the people to the verge of starvation, have brought a tremendous amount of money into the country.

The Bank of Norway—the Government's bank—had a year ago $20,000,000 in gold in its vaults. Today it has $40,000,000. A year ago it had issued paper money to the extent of $5,500,000 beyond its deposits, while today with the same amount of paper currency in circulation, it has a reserve of $3,000,000.

Deposits in private banks are at present $30,000,000 greater than a year ago.

BRITISH WARSHIP SUNK?

Germans Report One Lost and Two Damaged by Zeebrugge Batteries.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.)—One British warship was sunk and two others were damaged in the attack by a British squadron on German batteries along the Belgian coast, especially at Zeebrugge, simultaneously with the launching of the new allied offensive movement on land, according to the following German official statement of Sept. 26:

British ships attacked the German coast batteries, especially at Zeebrugge. The attack failed, and, after one ship had been sunk and two others damaged, the ships withdrew.

The foregoing claim of losses inflicted upon the British naval forces attacking the Belgian coast was omitted from the German official statement as cabled through London yesterday.

FRENCH TRANSPORT SUNK.

Athens Reports the Disaster—Liner Transylvania Safe.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (by Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—"A dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung from Athens says that a French transport steamer of 5,000 tons has been sunk by an Austrian submarine in the Libyan Sea," says the Overseas News Agency. "The steamer was carrying coal from Malta to Cypress."

The agents of the Anchor Line received a cablegram from the head office in Glasgow yesterday afternoon saying the reported sinking of the steamer Transylvania off the Island of Crete on Sept. 21 was false. This was in reply to a cabled inquiry regarding the safety of the Transylvania sent to Glasgow after the report had been published in the afternoon newspapers.

ROMANCE IN WORK OF SUPPLY COLUMN

Philip Gibbs Writes of Caravans of Motor Lorries That Take Food to England's Troops.

"OLD HARTLEY" IS FAMOUS

Seemed Doomed to the Scrap Heap, but Was Always Saved, and is Now Cheered Everywhere.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Philip Gibbs, writing in The Daily Chronicle from General Headquarters on "Bringing Up the Grub," says:

"Pious men in the trenches, who are also very hungry men, utter their little morning prayer of 'Give us this day our daily bread,' and, after sniping a German or two, wait impatiently for breakfast. Their prayer is not unanswered, and already at the break of dawn, along many highways of war in Flanders, the divisional supply columns are coming up from railheads to refilling stations with the army's food. They are the life preservers of the fighting men—who take their grub for granted. If these long caravans of motor lorries were to lose themselves on the way, or get cut off by the enemy (some of them had to be abandoned in the great retreat), it would be a disaster for British arms. Because, as Napoleon said, an army fights on its stomach.

"The other morning, sitting by the side of a young captain of one of these columns, whose motor car led the way for all his lorries, I realized the romance of our progress in the light of dawn. Outwardly there was nothing romantic or adventurous about us. An artist would not have found a picturesque subject, perhaps, in this long line of heavy motor wagons, painted a dark green, spaced out along the road like a fleet in line of battle, and loaded with bread and meat and groceries. Fowls cluttered away from our wheels, frowsy Flemish girls came yawning to the doors of squalid cottages and flung out dirty water on the sidewalks; only the boom of guns, rumbling intermittently, came as a reminder that we were in the war zone, and not much beyond range of the enemy's great guns. Where was the romance here?

"Well, I knew where it was because for a little while I had been living with the column, and soaking in the spirit of it, and hearing all its story since those days in August a year and more ago, when it came up the Seine to Rouen with thirty-eight lorries in an eight knot tramp, and then plunged straight away into the bloody tumult of Armageddon. As the Captain led the way to the refilling station, there was more behind him than bully beef and biscuits, or pickles and marmalade. There was history behind him, of wild days and nights with an army in retreat, of a column of supplies searching for brigades which had gone astray down the roads, of narrow escapes from bursting shells and hostile cavalry, and of Winter months when mud ditches on the slope of a steeply cumbered pavé had had an irresistible attraction for all his lorries. * * * The division had always been fed. That was the main result of all his struggles, and the chief credit to the column. Good enough, it seems to me.

Drivers Proud of Their Work.

"I understood the sentiment of this young officer—carefully concealed behind a slight air of boredom and the upward twist of a fair mustache—when at the cleaning parade in the afternoon he went along the line of lorries and pointed out their various characteristics. The drivers and loaders were greasy men just then squatting beneath the chassis with oil rags, or polishing up the engines until they shone like silver and gold, but as the Captain passed telling the tale of each lorry, as though of a heroic chariot of war, the men listened and their eyes brightened with the pride of engineers who have taken a tramp steamer and urged on its boilers to rough many an ugly sea.

"'Ah!' said one of them, 'that was a great day at Meaux, when we nearly got cut off by the Germans. Do you remember, Sir? We'd hardly time to cross the bridge before it was blown up.'

"To me each lorry seemed the twin brother of the next until I had learned more about them. But the officers and men of the column knew each one at a glance, and for them it had an individual character.

"'There was 'good old Hartley'—always cheered along the road by the boys who were at Mons and Le Cateau. I traveled on it myself, back from the refilling point, and sure enough, as we passed a battalion on the road, the men grinned, and shouted out, 'Good old Hartley! Still running?' For months she has never failed to bring up the supplies to the ammunition train, dodging shells on her morning trips.

"'Then there was 'old Lazenby,' sometimes called 'Pickles.' She had been through many a narrow shave, and had got bogged scores of times, and had almost been scrapped until the master mechanic, who loved all the column this side idolatory, had put in some new spare parts, and tightened things up a bit, and kept her on the road. It was the same with 'Hovis' and 'Jacobs' and 'old Carter Paterson'—their medical history is so full of details that there are not many of their original parts left, and only the outer body and the inner soul of the lorry remains unchanged after all this patching up and refitting of fans, radiators, cylinders, magnetos, cardan shafts, axles, valves, pistons, and die cases.

"'There were times,' said one of the drivers of 'old Hartley,' 'when it seemed impossible to save her. "She's gone at last," said my chum. But down we'd go, tightening up a screw here, or tying on a bit of string there—anything to keep her going—until we could get to the journey's end, and, sure enough, here she is still, God bless her!'

"Out of the thirty-eight lorries which came out a year ago, twenty-three still remain, and were spick and span on the road when I traveled with them a day or two ago.

German Officer's Heroism.

"'I had a German officer sitting where you are,' said the driver of 'Hartley.' 'He was frightfully wounded, so that I had to put one arm around his neck to keep him from slipping, while I held the steering wheel with the other hand. My chum offered him a piece of bread, but he shook his head and said, "The men first." After we had fed the others—all in a fearful and famished state—he ate ravenously. I think that was fine of him. * * * I shall never forget the awful condition of the wounded. I shiver when I think of it all now. But we helped to save their lives, and I'm glad of that.

"The spirit of the men is shown by one of their adventures in the early days when a lorry was hopelessly broken down near the enemy's lines. Some gunners passed and shouted out: 'There are thirty-five minutes between you and the enemy. You'd better hurry up, boys. We're the rear guard.'

"'That's all right,' said one of the mechanics, who was working in a mixture of mud and grease. 'I can get her going in twenty minutes.' And he did.

"Recently most of the adventures have been on special work apart from the ordinary supplies when the lorries have gone up to the firing lines with barbed wire and other

AUSTRIA AGREES TO RECALL DUMBA

Ambassador Penfield, at Vienna, So Notified Informally, He Cables State Department.

FORMAL ANSWER DELAYED

Austrian Envoy Cancels Sailing Reservation on Rotterdam and Awaits Safe Conduct.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The Austro-Hungarian Government will recall Ambassador Dumba, according to information sent to the State Department by Ambassador Penfield from Vienna. The formal reply of the Austro-Hungarian Government to the note from Secretary Lansing asking for Dr. Dumba's recall has not been received, but Mr. Penfield has been informally acquainted with the fact that the Vienna Government will recall its Ambassador. Mr. Penfield has been instructed to make clear informally that "leave of absence" for Dr. Dumba would not satisfy the request of the United States for the recall of Dr. Dumba.

Dr. Dumba has been desirous of sailing for Europe on the Rotterdam, scheduled to leave New York tomorrow, but no safe conduct has been given to him for the passage through the British lines. The State Department has received from the British and French Governments a safe conduct for Mme. Dumba.

Charge d'Affaires Barclay of the British Embassy called on Acting Secretary Polk at the State Department today and later the Secretary said that the necessary information which would assure Dr. Dumba's unmolested passage would be arranged by wire within a few hours if Vienna's acquiescence in the American request for his recall should arrive in time.

The remaining copies of the documents taken from James F. J. Archibald by the British Government at Falmouth, which were understood to have been sent on the White Star liner Cymric, which arrived in this port yesterday, have not reached the State Department. An erroneous report was current in Washington this afternoon that these documents had been received and turned over to Acting Secretary of State Polk. An official said that the State Department did not know positively whether these documents were sent on the Cymric or on one of the American line steamers not yet due in New York.

The Cymric flies the British flag and instructions were given to Ambassador Page, on account of the loss of American mails on the Arabic and Hesperian, not to place any more State Department mail pouches on British steamers for the present. Ambassador Page indicated that he would place the documents on the Cymric.

WON'T SAIL ON ROTTERDAM.

Now Expected Dumba Will Get Away on Nieuw Amsterdam Oct. 5.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 27.—Ambassador Dumba, it is learned, will not sail on the Rotterdam next Wednesday. It is said the Rotterdam reservation has been canceled and a new reservation made on the Nieuw Amsterdam of the same line, the Holland-America, sailing Oct. 5. Dr. Dumba's secretary tonight refused to confirm the report, saying, "There has been no change in Dr. Dumba's arrangements," and Dr. Dumba himself refused to make any statement and said he should not have anything further to say while he remained in America, as he felt he had made too many statements already. As to the recall of the Ambassador, it was said that The Associated Press dispatch giving the news was the first information received regarding the action of the Austrian Government.

The fact that Dr. Dumba had canceled his provisional reservation on the Rotterdam was confirmed here yesterday. No reservation has been made for Dr. Dumba on the Nieuw Amsterdam, sailing Oct. 5.

BOTHA'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Rode Over German Mine That Loose Horse Afterward Exploded.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SYDNEY, Australia,. Aug. 28.—Although the war, so far as South Africa is concerned, is over, every scrap of news which reaches Australia concerning General Louis Botha—the fine spirit of the former Boer Generalissimo against whom many Australians fought not many years since—is read with intense interest. So also with accounts of the arduous but successful campaign he conducted in German Southwest Africa.

Major Harry Trew, who was at the head of Botha's bodyguard, has written to a cousin here showing that Botha came within a hair's breadth of being killed by a German mine. He says:

"We have been trekking day and night, and even when the various columns had a day's halt we got no rest because we had to ascort the General from column to column. We saw very little fighting on the advance, as the German tactics were to delay us as much as possible without risking a battle; so their opposition took the form of long-range sniping, mining all roads and passes, and poisoning all the wells as they fell back.

"We had to have analysts with all the scouts to test the water. This was a difficult matter, as they used everything, from Cooper's (sheep) dip to the bacillus of cholera.

"God is undoubtedly on our side, for the escapes from mines were truly wonderful. The favorite form was one in which a thin steel rod projected about an inch above the surface of the ground. This steel firing pin ran through a tube, at the bottom of which was a thin glass tube containing a high explosive. Any pressure on the pin broke the glass and fired the charge, which often consisted of twelve boxes of dynamite. With them all we lost only ten men killed and twenty wounded. They got on one's nerves badly, though, especially during a night march. The General, staff, and bodyguard rode over one, which was afterward fired by a loose horse. In Kuba's Nek our engineers discovered and exploded eighty-four of these mines.

"The General is a great source of anxiety to me. He does not know what fear is, and as soon as a shot goes off he fidgets until he gets up to the firing line. He is a most charming chief to work for, and as a General would, in my opinion, take first place in any army in the world. His strategy is bold and farseeing. His combinations over a vast front invariably come off as he has planned them. Local success or failure does not elevate or depress him. All his attention is fixed on the big objective. While always trying to turn his enemy out of strong positions by wide flanking movements, he is quite prepared to fight when anything is to be gained by so doing.

"I entered Windhoek, and my Sergeant Major had the honor of hoisting the Union Jack there. I managed to get the flag that was presented to the Governor by the Kaiser. It is a huge thing that used to be flown on State occasions. It is red, black, and white, with a large double eagle in the centre and the royal crown over it. Did I tell you the inscription carved on the captured German guns we got? I think it is rather fine—'Ultima ratio regis, ('The final argument of the King.')'"

BARE BRONX BEAR BEARS UP BRAVELY

Suffers Penalty for Defying Fashion and Going About All Summer Without His Furs.

SHIVERS IN AUGUST BLAST

September Brings Back Ivan's Sofa Pillow Stuffing and He Has Hopes for the Winter.

The recent visitor to the Zoölogical Park in the Bronx may have noticed shambling up and down in one of the bear pits a disconsolate bear with a coat like a badly moth-eaten rug and indications of a disposition that matched his adornment. That is Ivan, the 1,300-pound Alaskan bear, the largest of his kind in the collection. If the visitor were to inquire as to the reason for the unkempt appearance of Ivan's coat, Charles Snyder, head keeper, would unfold a tale of trial and tribulation in which Ivan and his coat had the chief part.

Ivan is just regaining his hair as protection against the long and cold Winter that the Indians predict is coming. In the hot months the bears shed their coats, and, as Snyder says, this simple act of nature does away with the services of a barber. Ivan did not begin to shed his fur until late in the Summer, and the keepers were much surprised by the delay. The warm days were upon the Bronx and the other bears were in fine trim to withstand the heat before the big beast showed signs of losing his covering. Long after the usual time when the Alaskan bears get rid of their heavy clothing, big Ivan lumbered about his pit looking so uncomfortable that Snyder on his way to the reptile house used to go out of the way to avoid seeing his uncomfortable friend.

"The big fun is shedding," was the announcement made one hot day by Keeper Toomey.

Snyder, much interested in the report, went out to look. He described what he saw afterward to his friends.

"Ivan was not shedding in the ordinary sense," he explained. "His shaggy hair was just coming out like a rain fall. As I looked he rubbed against an iron bar, and when he moved off you could see where the bar had rubbed the fur off just as though he had been sidewiped by a giant safety razor. It was interesting, but I knew from that there was going to be trouble. There always is when anything out of the ordinary happens among animals.

Fills Zoo Sofa Cushions.

"It may be of interest to note that within four hours after the keepers first noticed that Ivan was losing his hair one of the bear keepers gathered enough hair to fill three sofa cushions. This just shows how fast that bear became bald."

Within two days Ivan's loss of bulk was a source of amazement to visitors. The complete shedding of the long shaggy Winter hair from his massive frame was as complete as was the surprise of the Zoo men. Ivan appeared fully a third smaller than during the cold months.

The first trouble came because Ivan could not reconcile himself to be a quick-change artist. Snyder says that after he caught sight of himself in the pool in the centre of his cage he became so despondent that it was necessary to draw the water off. The authorities feared he might attempt suicide, so Snyder said.

"Ivan just used to mope. He and I were great friends, but he became so ashamed that he took to hiding so that I could not see him. One of the keepers, I forget which one, wanted me to put a calico wrapper on Ivan, but I did not consider that a remedy, but an added humiliation. Poor old Ivan. There were days when he could not be lured into the sight of visitors. I used to try and tempt him out, but he would look at me just as though he would have said: 'I can't, Charlie. I haven't got my clothes on.'"

In time this modesty was overcome, and Ivan got to enjoy his fitness for hot weather. Then another trouble arose. He shed so fast that he became very susceptible to temperature changes. On very hot days he was all right, but with the slightest drop in temperature Ivan would shiver like a sufferer from chills and fever. Strange to say, this gave him added value as an attraction, Snyder said, and he explained it by saying that upon a warm day the sight of a great animal shivering from cold was a comforting sight to the perspiring visitors who thronged in front of the cage. Of course, Ivan had to do this before company, for the cool interior of the bear cave was too much for him.

Big Bear in a Mackinaw.

The troubles of Ivan attracted so much attention that a Western visitor donated a Mackinaw with which to keep Ivan warm. The plan appealed to Snyder, and he and two other keepers undertook to persuade the bear to wear the coat. It took them nearly two hours to get the great brute into it, and then it took half the employes of the park to restrain the indignant animal from "taking his spite" out upon his volunteer clothiers. For a time there were lively times around the bear pits, until Ivan succeeded in tearing the Mackinaw off, and got to comfortably shivering again. The only success in this direction was that Ivan was persuaded after some weeks of training to wear a woolen muffler to protect his throat.

Among animal men the case aroused discussion, and they agreed that there was pressing need for a hair restorer. This need was intensified because Ivan succeeded in wearing off even the fuzz on one side by rubbing against the bars, and he suffered greatly on windy days when he unintentionally exposed that side to the wind. Bill Snyder of the Zoo in Central Park wrote Snyder of the Bronx (not relatives) a letter in which he advocated the efficacy of sheep milk, the great Central Park hair restorer.

The use of this remedy was considered for several days, but was decided against on the ground that it was too sticky. Charley Snyder wrote that he did not intend to make Ivan a great fly paper monument, but a report reached the Bronx that Snyder of Central Park had charged the refusal to use his celebrated remedy to professional jealousy.

With the passing of Summer another trouble threatened. After shivering throughout the Summer there was danger of his freezing to death with the coming of Winter if the hair did not come on promptly. For a time there was every indication that this was to be the case, but only a few days ago Toomey came to the reptile house bearing to Snyder the glad news that there were indications that Ivan was about to take on his Winter overcoat. Tufts of hair were coming out all over the bear, he reported, and Ivan was working himself into a perfect frenzy of rejoicing.

Still a Moth-Eaten Beast.

At the present time Ivan is about as moth-eaten an animal as one can see in a tour of the Zoölogical Park, but he is happy and so is Snyder, for both feel that their Summer troubles are over.

"I suppose," said Snyder yesterday, "if I had used the Snyder hair restorer the keepers in Central Park would be taking the credit. Nothing doing. It's just nature getting in her work. If that bear has any more trouble I shall have nervous prostration. Ivan's all right now, but his weather side is still sensitive."

"The lesson from all this," commented Curator Raymond Ditmars, who stood by while Snyder related his troubles, "is that one should see the disastrous effects of going against fashion's decrees, for last Summer the proper thing was to wear fur. Ivan was terribly out of fashion, and this caused all the trouble."

POLITE BUT FIRM TO MRS. BOISSEVAIN

Officials, in Asking Her to Leave Italy, Seemed to be "Bowing Her Out."

DUE TO HER PACIFIST VIEWS

She Arrives from Genoa on the Stampalia — Will Now Do More Work for Suffrage Amendment.

After being courteously requested to leave Italy by the officials of the Government on account of her "pacifist" writings, Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain received another shock yesterday when she arrived from Genoa on the Italian liner Stampalia and was told by the Immigration Inspector that she could not land as an American.

When the purser made out the passenger manifest he put down Eugen Boissevain as a Hollander and his wife as an American living in New York. The Inspector explained to Mrs. Boissevain that she had lost her citizenship by marriage. Her husband, who was standing by the table in the dining saloon, where the Inspector was examining the alien passengers, said: "Never mind. I shall have my citizenship in two months, and then Mrs. Boissevain will become an American citizen again."

Mrs. Boissevain said that after going over in May on the American liner St. Paul she traveled through France to Italy, intending to write a series of articles on the Italian side of the war.

Arriving in Rome early in July she called on the Minister of War and made application for a permit to go to the front. After considerable delay she was notified that no neutral writers could take part in the proposed tour of correspondents to the Italian war zone. She circumvented this order by getting cabled instructions to act as correspondent for a Canadian newspaper, and finally managed to get permission to join a party of correspondents visiting Vincenza, Brescia, and Padua.

Mrs. Boissevain said that owing to delay in getting to these places the Italian Army had gone further ahead and the trenches and camps were all deserted. On Sept. 1 she was recalled to Rome, by order, it was, said, of Baron Sonnino, the Minister of Foreign Affairs. When she arrived in the capital she called at the Foreign Office to ask for an explanation of her sudden recall and was shown into the office of an official styled by his subordinates "Chief of the Cabinet," who politely informed her that the pacifist articles she had been sending home were not approved by the Italian Government.

Mrs. Boissevain inquired if it were true that a protest against the giving of permission to a woman American correspondent to visit the front had been lodged by American correspondents. The Italian official admitted that such was the case, but assured Mrs. Boissevain that it had nothing to do with the Foreign Minister's order that she be recalled.

"Are you sure that this protest did not influence the Foreign Minister in any way to cancel my permit for the front?" she asked.

"Not at all, my dear lady," the Chief of the Cabinet replied. "Though the protest was made, your return to Rome is due entirely to your pacifist writings."

"But don't you believe that war is bad?"

"We all think that war is a horror, but we don't want it dilated upon. It is not politic to have war presented from a pacifist point of view," was the reply.

Mrs. Boissevain gave this account of her interview with the official to reporters yesterday on board the Stampalia coming up the harbor from Quarantine to the pier at the foot of West Thirty-fourth Street. She said that she had been treated with the utmost courtesy by the Italian officials, who made her feel that she was being "bowed out of their country."

Mrs. Boissevain managed to get a permit for four days' sightseeing in Venice through the Marquis de Bagnio, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, and they also visited the Red Cross Hospital at Venice, which was filled with wounded soldiers from the front.

Mrs. Boissevain said they were going to their home at 247 Fifth Avenue. She intends to do all that she can to get men to vote for the equal suffrage constitutional amendment, which is to be presented in November.

BARON ISHII, SELF-MADE MAN

New Japanese Foreign Minister Rose to Place by Hard Work.

TOKIO, Aug. 20, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Baron Kikujiro Ishii, Ambassador to France, who has been named Foreign Minister, is a self-made man, risen from the ranks. He knows considerable about the United States and what are known as the "American problems." In 1907 he was sent to San Francisco and also to Vancouver to study the anti-Japanese movements.

The coming of Baron Ishii does not mean the effacement of Baron Kato, his predecessor, from power and influence. Baron Ishii is the close friend of Baron Kato, and was recommended for the post of Foreign Minister by Kato, after, it is understood, Viscount Chinda, Ambassador to Washington, had declined.

The man who will direct the Foreign Office in this difficult period is capable and tactful and modest in bearing. All Japanese public men are careful in speech; Ishii is especially conservative, but he gives the impression of frankness and sincerity. He has worked hard all his life. Above all things he has labored patiently. He is the most patient man in the Japanese diplomatic service. That was his record at Paris, where, for several years, he has sought to understand something of Western diplomacy so that his own country might profit. With patience especially he labored to place loans for his country in the markets of Paris and London.

It is no secret that Baron Kato will continue to be consulted by the Cabinet as to the foreign policy. The impression prevails at Tokio that Kato could have remained in the Ministry, but he was nettled at the criticism of the way he handled the Chinese negotiations. His friends believe he will return to active power at a later period.

SAVE ROOSEVELT'S HOUSE.

Watchman Spoils Plan to Burn Navy Secretary's Mansion.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Sept. 27.—An attempt to burn the handsome $50,000 home of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, which overlooks the Hudson, three miles north of this city, near Hyde Park, was made early this evening. The fire was extinguished by the fire company, of which Mr. Roosevelt is a member.

Men who are remodeling the historic old mansion had left an hour before Charles Tarpening, the night watchman, saw the flames coming from the building. The damage will not reach $200. The authorities found excelsior stuffed under the first floor of the building.

ment. It was said that, large as the amount is, the bond dealers expect a ready sale. A banker with important Chicago connections said the big packing interests not only would not offer any opposition to the loan, but had already indicated their intention of taking a large amount of the notes. Their support is looked to as important in swinging many banks carrying Armour, Swift, and Cudahy money into the syndicate.

Scattered objections are still coming into banks from disgruntled depositors with German sympathies. Most of the banks received yesterday a letter from the Chamber of German-American Commerce expressing the opinion that it would be "most improper" for any American bank or trust company to jeopardize its depositors' money by investing it in a loan to "any one of the billegerents."

Some amusement was caused by the fact that in several instances this letter reached institutions which last week bought German war bonds as an investment.

SUMS UP GERMAN POSITION.

Imperial Bank Chief Reviews Conditions of the Third War Loan.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (By Wireless Telegraphy to Sayville, L. I.)—Rudolf Havenstein, President of the Imperial Bank of Germany, reviewed the financial and economic position of the country at a meeting today of the Executive Committee of the bank. His remarks are reported as follows by the Overseas News Agency:

"The gold influx has again increased, after a short period of relaxation. In the last three weeks the gold reserve has increased 8,000,000 marks, ($2,000,000,) notwithstanding gold shipments in considerable amounts to foreign countries, for reasons well known.

"Loaning institutions hold securities to the value of only 262,000,000 marks for money borrowed for the second war loan. There is a gold cover of 43 1-3 per cent. for circulating Treasury notes.

"The increase in note circulation is due to lack of sufficient currency for use in Belgium and the occupied territories in the east. The civil population and the troops need currency of small denominations for their daily needs. The gold which was in circulation formerly in those territories disappeared before they were evacuated.

"The third war loan, according to reports now at hand, amounts to 12,066,-000,000 marks. Some subscriptions, including those from the army, for which the time was extended, are still outstanding.

"Economic conditions have been adapted entirely to the changed conditions. Iron and steel production have reached 100 per cent. of the amount in times of peace. The figure for coal and coke production are still higher. In spite of the call to arms of a majority of railway workers, traffic has increased steadily. The figures for July established a record surpassing that of peace times.

"Deposits of saving institutions have increased to such an extent that not only were the unusual demands of the third war loan satisfied easily, but there is available cash still to be disposed of. All classes of the population utilized their savings for the war loan, which was thus a people's loan in the true sense of the word.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 26, (via London Sept. 27.)—A large number of Turks, all of moderate means, subscribed an aggregate of nearly $500,000 to the third German war loan as an expression of sympathy for Germany. Virtually all the subscriptions were for small amounts.

OFFENSIVE AN AID TO LOAN.

New Yorker Herold Suggests That It Was "Ordered from New York."

Under the caption "A One-Day Success for the Sake of the Loan," the evening edition of the New Yorker Herold yesterday intimated that the Allies' advance in France was mere bluff. It said:

"The Allies have begun an offensive on the west front, which attained some success in its first rush, and which finally provides for our already despondent Briton papers the long-wished-for opportunity to report in great letters a victory of French and English arms. As for that, it is not so difficult to begin an offensive, but very difficult to continue it. Only in the next few days can it be told whether this is a case of more than local and temporary successes. It is to be expected that it is a case of one-day successes of the Allies and nothing more.

"We cannot rid ourselves of the thought that it is a case of momentary exertion of force aimed less at great military than at financial success. In other words, was the advance ordered from New York in order to create a better situation for the Pump Commission of the Allies? The circumstance, too, that at the same time the Russian Army, or what is left of it, was galvanized may be connected with the loan."

KAISER GIVES 40 MEDALS.

Two Score Have Received Order of Pour le Merite in This War.

BERLIN, Sept. 1. (Correspondence of The Associated Press:)—Forty prominent figures in the present war, ranging from Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria to the commandant of a German submarine, has been, up to Aug. 1, decorated with the Order Pour le Mérite, the highest military service medal within the gift of the German Emperor. Eight of those forty have received the additional gold oak leaves, with which the order is sometimes decorated as a mark of special favor.

The order is now 175 years old, but it has only been since 1810 that it has been conferred exclusively for extraordinary service in war. King Frederick William III. in that year stipulated that he would not "loan" it for any other cause, and three years later created the oak leaf complement to the order.

The names of those who have earned the Pour le Mérite in the present war are almost without exception known all over the world now, though many of them, probably the majority, had never been heard of before the present conflict began. Many were not even known in Germany. Here is the list:

Emperor Francis Joseph, General von Emmich, General Field Marshal von Hindenburg, General von Zwehl, Lieutenant von der Linde, General von Beseler, General von Quast, Lieut. Gen. Ludendorff, Captain Otto Weddigen, Col. General von Woyrsch, General Field Marshal von Mackensen, General Litzman, General Scheffer-Boyadel, Lieut. Gen. von Morgen, General von Mudra, General von Falkyenhayn, General Otto von Below, Lieut. Gen. Kosch, General von der Marwitz, Col. General von Einem, General Riemann, General Fleck, Prince Eitel Friedrich, General Field Marshal von Buelow, Col. Gen. von Kluck, Archduke Frederick of Austria, General Conrad von Koetzendorff of Austria, Major General von Skeekt, General von Linsingen, General von Francois, Archduke of Saxony-Altenburg, General von Plettenberg, Lieut. Gen. von Kreussi, Captain Kersing, Major General von Zieten, General von Bothmer, General von Gerok; General von Stolzmann, General von Gallwitz and General von Claer.

The extra oak leaves have been conferred on Hindenburg, Beseler, Mackensen, Emmich, Falkenhayn, Marwitz, Linsingen, and Ludendorff.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS' PATHETIC TRIBUTES

Rude Verses in Memory of Fallen Soldiers Written by Comrades.

MARK LINE OF RETREAT

Some Epitaphs Breathe Vengeance and Hope of Victory, but Most Express Only Affection.

In the wake of the Czar's retreating legions there follow a number of poets, who inscribe crosses on rocks, trunks of trees, or fence posts of ruined homes, little tributes to the dead. Unadorned by any fine style or metaphor, this untutored muse visits the trench or battlefield, expressing the simple emotion with which the Russian soldier in a few lines of an epitaph, often washed away by the next day's rain, seeks to perpetuate the memory of a fallen comrade.

These writings appear to one searching for curious mementoes of the battlefield in nooks and corners of a roadside, along forest edges, or wherever a favorite comrade may have been buried. And they are buried in the strangest spots, for war makes beggars even of the dead, and they cannot choose their resting places. Sometimes, when the exigencies of battle require haste, the slain are heaped into huge ditches, and over the mound is erected a rude birchwood cross, with a single line, such as "Here lie men who died for the Czar," and nothing more.

But, for the most part, the Russians try not to neglect their dead. Sometimes, with the hope that human hand may return to care for the graves, they bury them near a peasant's hovel, now desolate and shattered by cannon, or on the banks of some quiet stream, where the dead may listen to the perpetual solace of murmuring waters. Or they range a dozen or more fallen soldiers around the foot of a tree, which, swaying and sighing in the wind, becomes in the superstition of the mujik, inspired with the breath of the souls whose bodies lie beneath.

Thus the Russian surrenders his dead comrade to the communion of nature. His farewell tribute may be contained in a few lines of verse written on a cross, on the white bark of a tree, on a stone, or on anything near the grave that will carry the tracings of a pencil.

Some of them ring with hope in ultimate victory and proclaim in rather bombastic terms the almighty power of the Czar to vanquish the enemy. Some of them even threaten the Germans with retribution for invading the sacred soil of Russia. But most of the epitaphs, omitting harsh notes of vengeance and hatred, breathe nothing but affection for a dead comrade.

A young Russian officer who lingered like a truant along the line of march picked up many of these verses wherever they were legible, and sent them to the Novoe Vremya, the leading newspaper in Petrograd, with a request that they be printed. And, not having a D'Annunzio or a Kipling at the front, the Novoe Vremya printed them, not as literature, for they are far from that, but as recalling better than any official report from the battle front the morale of the Russian soldier in the face of defeat, adversity, and death.

Here is an example. The scene is a secluded corner of a Polish forest in the battle zone, where a number of soldiers have been buried in graves carefully trimmed with sod. Each grave bears a rough wooden cross, and on one of them the following lines were written:

Sleep, dear brother. From all earthly misfortunes thou art freed.
For Russia, for the Czar, and for truth thy blood thou hast shed.
Upon sacred records of the Church shall be
And God shall receive you, dear brother, in
His own holy name.
Bravely hast thou sacrificed mother, children, and wife.
Now must we conquer or, like thee, perish in the strife.

Another grave, near the edge of a stream, is that of a certain Ivan, described as a "brave, jolly fellow, killed with a smile on his lips." His comrades, who gathered over his body, penciled the following tribute on a tree near by:

It is not long since you came among us, oh, Comrade,
And no better servant in battle the Czar ever had.
Yet around your grave we have always stood.
And erected thereon a simple cross of wood,
An ikon, and an image lamp, all roughly made,
So that you might hear the blessed serenade.
Far have we buried you from all whom you hold dear.
And only we, your comrades, have gathered near,
Under the hum of bullets and shrieking shrapnel's scream,
To construct a birchwood cross upon your grave of green,
Hostile the sod under which you proudly lie.
But in our memory, Vanya, your soul will never die.

Over the grave of a soldier, who spent many a homesick night in the trenches and whose longing for wife and child was finally ended by a bullet through the heart, is written:

They need no longer expect you, dear comrade.
Yet, in your sleep of death be not so sad.
The Czar will guard all whom you cherished—
Your wife, your child. We, too, shall watch them
In memory of you who perished.

But bitterness and hatred find expression in a bit of verse written over the grave of an officer who was killed in a hard-fought battle which resulted in defeat for the Russians:

Gathered about thee after the heat of battle,
We offer eternal tribute to thy memory;
And, standing upon the graves of brothers,
Vengeance we swear upon our enemy.
Then let us rush once more into the conflict with all our might;
And either as conquerors we return or we perish all in the fight.

Four lines written on the bark of a tree around which were buried some officers of a Siberian regiment, who journeyed all the way from a flowerless land to die on Polish soil, are as follows:

Bring flowers, sweet Polish children,
Flowers to strew where we lie slain,
Flowers that bloom when May is golden;
Else we have come far to die in vain.

Whitney to Build New Hangars.

Harry Payne Whitney of Westbury contemplates the erection of a number of hangars on the site of the old shipyard on Manhasset Bay at Port Washington. Mr. Whitney, who recently announced that he will make flights on Long Island in his hydroaeroplane, applied to the Town Board of North Hempstead for the lease of land at Barrow Beach on Hempstead Harbor at Roslyn to erect several hangars. Yesterday the board was informed that Mr. Whitney had decided to make the flights over Manhasset Bay instead of in Hempstead Harbor.

BITTER DUMA ATTACKS ON THE BUREAUCRACY

Favoritism and Graft Held Responsible for Russia's Military Disasters.

To what lengths of denunciation of the bureaucracy's conduct of the war the members of the Russian Duma, recently prorogued by the Czar, have dared to go is indicated in reports of speeches sent by mail to the Journal de Genève—they were not telegraphed to Western Europe, probably because of the Russian censorship—and published in its issues of Aug. 31 and Sept. 1.

In the debate of Aug. 14, speaking as a representative of the Constitutional Democrats, M. Adjemoff directly attributed the shortage of munitions to the policy of the Government from the beginning of the war of confining its orders to a few favored contractors, whose facilities were inadequate for the supply of the requisite amount of war material.

"When Deputy Chingarieff," he said, "made an attempt in August, 1914, to draw the attention of the War Office to the country's new needs, when he tried to discuss the question of a general mobilization of industry, what did General Soukhomlinoff (the Minister of War, who has since been removed) say to him? I hope the answer of M. Soukhomlinoff will be the subject of investigation by the high court which has just been established.

"The nation recognized the character and the magnitude of the struggle and saw that, without the industrial organization of the country victory was impossible. The Government did not understand this, and when the representatives of the nation explained it, it still refused to understand. Then developed this state of things unheard of in the history of Russia: the people demanded a share in responsibilities, asked only to participate in the organization of the country, and they met only contempt and a self-conceit that bordered on crime. [Cries of 'That's so!']

"In disorganizing the country as it has done, has not the Government played into the hands of the enemy? Who is the chief culprit? Remember, gentlemen, that outside of the problem of munitions there are the problems of the fuel and food supplies and of the railways. Remember that throughout the empire it has not only refused to let the country organize, but has promoted disorganization. Whenever the nation has undertaken to do something it has met the greatest opposition on the part of the Government. Chief among these factors of disorganization has been the former Minister of the Interior, M. Maklakoff. Today, when the question is put as to the responsibility of the Minister of War, who has built and furnished the army with munitions, is it not also in order to look into the responsibility of this 'slick statesman,' as he is called, who has plunged the country into such a predicament? Is it to be allowed that the man who has disorganized Russia sit in the Council of the Empire and take part in the debates on the organization of the country?"

M. Adjemoff then proceeded to argue in favor of a law creating a sub-Ministry of Munitions—a project which has since been realized—and added:

"But whatever solution you adopt, you must determine that the Munitions Committee attached to the Ministry of War shall be directed by a man who possesses the confidence of the country. The legislative chambers cannot content themselves with enacting a law the execution of which is intrusted to some bureaucrat out of a job.

"The important thing is that the Government has finally arrived at the comprehension of the fact that, without the nation, it cannot win the victory. It has declared that it recognizes this truth. It recognizes that what it has organized in the past must be transformed, and transformed by us. That, gentlemen, is our victory, the victory of public opinion, and the lesson, alas! of this terrible moment. Mr. Lloyd George said recently in the House of Commons that in raining shells upon our troops the Germans were destroying the chains of the Russian people. That is strictly true. The Russian people are free today, and are going to organize themselves for victory."

Speaking at the same session of the Duma, M. Purgoff, a Siberian Deputy, asserted that the Government agents refused to buy horses for the army from the peasants, confining their purchases to a few great breeders, who bought the peasants' rejected stock and resold it at a profit. Siberian farmers, he said, had sold oats to the Ministry of Agriculture for 40 or 45 kopecks (20 or 22½ cents) a pood, (about three-fifths of a bushel,) which had been sold in Russia proper for two rubles 80 kopecks ($1.40). He cited several cases in which the army had received supplies of hay which was entirely rotten, and said that repeatedly the Commissary Department had set fire to forage a day or three days before the order to retreat had been given, in order, as the soldiers believed, to destroy the evidence of their swindling operations. "It looks like a repetition of the history of the Russo-Japanese war," said M. Doumbadze.

Similar frank recognition of Russia's administrative shortcomings, and a determination to retrieve the defeats attributed to them, are voiced in a letter to the Journal which, with some deletions by the Russian censorship, was published in the Aug. 29 issue of that newspaper.

After admitting the magnitude of recent reverses, a correspondent, writing from Moscow, says:

"But the sombre picture of the evacuation of Galicia and Warsaw has its bright side. Discouragement has not taken root, but instead of yielding to it we are taking part in a great movement of public opinion, of personal initiative, the best and even the mediocre elements having recognized the necessity of exerting themselves and no longer leaving everything to a bureaucratic administration.

closed had been considered dangerous by the Public Service Commission.

Mr. McCall last night sent to the Mayor a letter which conveys a hint of friction in its criticism of the Mayor's statements:

September 27, 1915.

Hon. John Purroy Mitchel,
Mayor, City of New York,
City Hall, New York City:

My Dear Mr. Mayor: Your favor of the 27th was brought to me through the kindness of Mr. Lewis, and replying, I beg to say that in the judgment of the commission the restrictions placed upon the traffic over cut and cover work may be so modified that they will apply only to exceptionally heavy or heavily ladened trucks, classifying within such description trucks that, with or without their loadings, will exceed ten tons, and that even such vehicles be allowed to proceed over the decking as they approach from side streets and asle to go to a point of destination within the block for purposes of loading or unloading, and, in case of contractors, that no prohibition at all be placed upon their vehicles of any description; but in all cases where traffic is indulged over the decking that there be a rigid enforcement of a speed limit not to exceed eight miles an hour. It is our judgment that this treatment of the subject will adequately meet the situation from a viewpoint of safety.

As to the recommendation on the Lexington Avenue work, an error was made in suggesting that the bracing be done between Forty-second Street and Forty-third Street, as our work does not come south of Forty-third Street, but the Engineering Department will take this subject under advisement at once and report their views upon it.

I appreciate fully the findings of the Engineering Department of your committee that so great a proportion of the subway work is safe for traffic, but I am concerned about, although I do not understand, the assertion that "from Twenty-sixth north to Third-third Street * * * there exists within this distric a grave danger a the present time," because

Firstly—From a point just north of Thirty-third Street to a point north of Thiry-third Street, Broadway, as yet has not been disturbed at all by subway work.

Secondly—The details you state were to be presented to me were not given and I am informed cannot be had for at least two days.

Notwithstanding, however, and for the purpose of our mutual effort to keep each abprised of our progress, working to a common end, I beg to advise you that work has been constantly going on to bring about the highest degree of safety.

Very truly yours,
EDWARD E. McCALL, Chairman.

The morning saw the opening of traffic of most of the streets which had been closed pending investigation. In many places additional shoring had been installed and at others where roadways crossed subway cuts on timber supports it was found that the bracing was sufficient to prevent a collapse. Engineers and workmen were putting in additional braces all night, but it was nearly 11 o'clock before all the crosstown lines of the New York Railways Company were in operation.

The closing of long sections of Broadway and Seventh Avenue to north and south traffic resulted in much congestion on Fifth and Sixth Avenues, and was felt all day long in a slowing of vehicles all over the city.

In response to pleas of the Broadway Association, supplemented by a committee of merchants headed by R. H. Macy & Co., the police did their best to get some sort of traffic resumed between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-ninth Streets. From the lower side of Thirty-seventh to the lower side of Thirty-ninth the street area was roped off; below that persons afoot were allowed, and vehicles were permitted to cross at Thirty-sixth. Except the half block above Thirty-eighth Street on the eastern side foot traffic was allowed on sidewalks all the way, but from Thirty-seventh to Thirty-ninth Street only those who could give an account of their business were allowed to pass.

Two Theatres Reopen.

The Casino Theatre, at Broadway and Thirty-ninth Street, and the Knickerbocker Theatre, in Broadway, just above Thirty-eighth, were open last night, although the Knickerbocker's patrons had to go in by the side entrance from Thirty-eighth Street. J. F. Downie, manager of the Hotel Marlborough, characterized as absurd reports that the hotel might have to shut down temporarily on account of the impossibility of getting coal in from Broadway.

The streets at present closed to all up and downtown vehicular traffic are Broadway from Twenty-sixth to Thirty-ninth, and Seventh Avenue from Six-teenth to Thirty-first Street. The Broadway and Seventh Avenue street car lines are not running through between these points and the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Street crosstown line is tied up. Either surface car traffic will be resumed, Crosstown traffic is permitted on Broadway at Twenty-sixth, Thirty-first, Thirty-second, Thirty-third, Thirty-fourth, Thirty-sixth, and Thirty-ninth Streets, and on Seventh Avenue, at Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-third, Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth, Thirtieth, and Thirty-first.

The committee of engineers appointed by Mayor Mitchel recommended the removal of all traffic regulations on Flatbush Avenue Extension, and in Manhattan on Broadway south of Twenty-sixth Street, on Varick, Canal Street and West Broadway, and on Seventh Avenue south of Sixteenth Street, as well as on several crossings. Additional facilities have been recommended at other points, particularly on Lexington Avenue between Forty-second and Forty-third

FIGHTS WILL OF LAST OF TWO OLD CHUMS

Niece Charges His Physician Influenced Albert Scharf in His Testament.

BURIED BESIDE HIS FRIEND

Aged Man Lived with Fellow-Veteran of Civil War—Both Alike Even in Their Dress.

The hearing of the suit of Agnes P. Anhagen of Woodland, Cal., to break the will of her uncle, Albert Scharf, a civil war veteran and retired hotelkeeper, will begin before Surrogate Ketcham in Brooklyn on Monday. The suit is based on the charge that undue influence was used to produce the will, which left the greater part of the property to Dr. Charles G. Purdy of 191 Linden Avenue, Brooklyn, and to Max Ritterhausen, a nephew of Mr. Scharf.

In the last year of his life, Mr. Scharf, who died on May 18, 1915, had become attached to Dr. Purdy. In November, 1914, he made the will, which revoked an earlier will in favor of Maurice Feiger, who for years had stood in the relation of a ward to Mr. Scharf. The plaintiff, who also was ignored in the will, made accusations against Dr. Purdy in her suit.

A year before he died, Mr. Scharf, who already had considerable property, inherited the entire estate of Jacob Liebmann, but it is said that the total value of his estate will be less than $25,000.

The friendship between Liebmann and Scharf began at the close of the civil war, in which both served. Scharf lost his left leg in the Wilderness. He borrowed $500 from Liebmann and started a hotel in 1865 at Canal and Chrystie Streets. Liebmann entered the dry goods business.

The two men, both of whom remained bachelors, lived together at 180 Eldridge Street. As they grew older they became inseparable. Each wore a black broad-brimmed felt hat, and they had their clothes made after the same pattern by the same tailor. They wore gold watches of the same design, and each wore a large diamond ring. Every year they went together for two months to Saratoga Springs or Sharon Springs, where they became well-known figures. They made wills, each living his entire estate to the survivor.

Became Baby's Friends.

The housekeeper of the two rented the third floor of the dwelling in Eldridge Street about twenty-six years ago, when they were away on their Summer vacation, to a family with five children, although instructions had been given that the apartment was not to be rented to families with children. They grumbled at first, but later struck up a great friendship with Maurice Feiger, then 2 years old, and the youngest of the family. When they moved to an apartment in 151st Street, near Broadway, they induced the family to let Maurice, who was then 6 years old, live with them. He remained with them until he was 14.

After that Feiger spent Sunday and two or three nights a week with the old man. They later moved to 915 New York Avenue, Brooklyn, and six years ago Scharp became ill and delirious. The veteran had suffered frequently from pains in the amputated leg, and ever since the civil war had stuck to a remedy which had been given to him at the time, consisting of a dose of strong medicine followed by a tumblerful of whiskey. His serious illness at this time was due to his loyalty to this remedy.

Liebmann and Feiger sent for Dr. Charles G. Purdy, who lived in the neighborhood. The patient, because of his ravings, was barred from several hospitals, but finally was admitted to the Kings County Hospital, where he remained three months. All this time he was treated by Dr. Purdy. He not only recovered, but outlived his friend Liebmann, who was more than 70 years old when he died, on May 22, 1914.

The old men had planned to be buried beside each other, but a hitch here arose, because Liebmann was a Jew and Scharp a Lutheran. This difficulty was overcome by their joint purchase of a plot in the part of the Cypress Hills Cemetery where both Jews and Gentiles are buried.

Quarrelled With Feiger.

After the death of Liebmann, Dr. Purdy began to attend Scharp, and a little later the old man and Feiger had a violent quarrel. Scharp demanded from Feiger a diamond ring worth $500, which had belonged to Liebmann. Feiger refused to part with it. The old man raised his cane and ordered Feiger out of his house. Feiger wrote a letter to Scharp making various charges against Dr. Purdy, whom he held responsible for the quarrel. After that the separation between Scharp and the young man became permanent. On May 18, 1915, less than a year after the death of Liebmann, Scharp died. He was buried, according to his last instructions, beside Liebmann, and the funeral service, though it was not Jewish, was performed by the Rabbi who had buried Liebmann.

His will gave $4,000 outright to Max Rittenhausen and $4,000 outright to Dr. Purdy. After providing for several small bequests, it divided the remainder of the estate between the two who were made executors. A codicil, made out on a letterhead of Dr. Purdy five months after the will made, left Feiger $500, and said:

"Note: It was my intention to give to the said Maurice Feiger a larger amount than the above designated $500, bu this conduct toward me since the death of my dear friend, Jacob Liebmann, has been so cruel and unkind that I have left him nothing in my last will and testament."

The codicil was witnessed by Dr. Purdy himself and by Benjamin L. Bancroft, a druggist, living near Dr. Purdy. Mr. Feiger denies all the allegations against himself. If the will is broken he will lose the $500 bequest. Nevertheless, he is to be one of the witnesses for the contestant. He is employed in the office of the Jobson-Gifford Company at 80 East Forty-second Street.

LEVINE STICKS TO HIS STORY

Describes in Court How He Says Unionists Killed Worker.

In a cross-examination lasting nearly eight hours, counsel for the seven members of the Cloak and Suit Makers' Union on trial for murder in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court endeavored yesterday to break down the testimony of Isaac Levine, a garment worker, who testified he saw Herman Liebowitz, a strikebreaker, clubbed to death in front of the union's headquarters, at 85 East Fourth Street, on the night of July 31, 1910. Abe Levy, one of the lawyers for the accused, also tried to force an admission from Levine that he was helping the prosecution out of revenge, having been expelled from the Cloakmakers' Union, but the witness stuck to his first story.

Lawyer Levy asked the witness to illustrate before the jury what he saw of the attack upon Liebowitz. The assault was then enacted, without any blows being delivered. Lawyer Levy acted as Liebowitz, and Levine, the witness, and the court interpreter assumed the respective rôles of Morris Stupnicker and Morris Sigman, two of the defendants. The witness and the interpreter then pushed the lawyer from the step leading to the witness stand, resorting to none of the violence, however, that was used in the attack on Liebowitz.

Under cross-examination, Levine said he noticed no marks of blows on Liebowitz's face as he was being pushed out of the union headquarters. But he saw Stupnicker and Sigman strike the man somewhere about the head and then throw him into the gutter, after which they, with some of the other defendants, "stepped on Liebowitz with their feet."

TOOK TIPS FROM ALIENS.

County Clerk Schneider Says He Forced Out Three Clerks.

Three clerks employed in the Naturalization Bureau were permitetd to resign yesterday by County Clerk Schneider instead of being dismissed for taking tips from aliens who applied for their citizenship papers. There had been much complaint against the tipping vice and of the evil that grew out of it—lack of attention and brusque treatment if no tip loomed near. The rule of "no tips" was made. The attention of the clerks was called to it, and when several of them were caught tipping they were warned. Many warnings did not seem to do some of the clerks any good. Then the drastic treatment of forcing the men out was resorted to.

"The men who call here for their citizenship papers," said Mr. Schneider, "are poor men, as a rule, and they cannot afford more than pay the necessary fees. Many of the men believed that it was necessary to tip and some of the clerks were weak enough to accept the gratuities. In spite of many warnings they kept up the practice, and so I asked them to resign."

COOPER UNION TERM OPENS.

Institution Will Start This Year with 9,369 Students.

Cooper Union night classes opened last night with an enrollment of 1,459 in the technical courses and 1,330 in the art school. The day technical school also opened with an enrollment of 330.

New applications for admission to the classes this year number 7,317, and promotions from last year's classes number 2,052, making the total demand upon the institution of 9,369 students.

Many applications are being received for the new course under William de Leftwich Dodge in design for mural decoration, stained glass, illustration, posters, book work, and advertising. Another class in design for interior decoration, including carpets, wallpapers, curtains, and furniture will be opened next week.

The woman's art school and classes in stenography and telegraphy will open Oct. 4.

No One Hurt in N. Y. U. "Rush."

The great September "rush" of the freshmen of New York University was last night definitely stopped by the sophomores, although the first year men broke through the first line of trenches. No one was injured. A pole fifteen feet high had been erected on the athletic field and carefully greased with soap and wax. On top of it fluttered a small sophomore pennant, and around it about ninety of the second year men gathered. After the freshmen had repeatedly failed to scale the pole, Referee R. Moore of the junior class adjudged the sophomores victors.

ACTOR GOES GAILY TO JAIL.

Charles Ahearn Willing to Serve Six Months to Escape Alimony.

Charles Ahearn, who was doing a thriving business on the vaudeville circuit of the Middle West, left Cleveland on Saturday night and appeared in the Sheriff's office yesterday with the news that he was going to Ludlow Street Jail for six months in order to escape paying his wife alimony. Ahearn sued his wife, Vesta, for a divorce and she sued him for a separation. She won and recevied $35 a week. He owes her $655. Because Ahearn didn't keep the payments up Justice Shearn signed the order of arrest and then postponed the service two weeks to let the defendant complete his contracts.

Deputy Sheriffs McDonnell and Zeltner escorted Ahearn to the jail. He was chipper and chatty en route and thought it quite possible that he would meet others of his profession in the Alimony Club, and that some very good entertainments might be given to the end that dull care might be banished. Ahearn has a suit for $50,000 pending against Sime Silverman, publisher of a theatrical paper, whom he accuses of alienating the affections of Mrs. Ahearn.

BELGIAN PRIMA DONNA

Sings Tomorrow

ALICE VERLET,

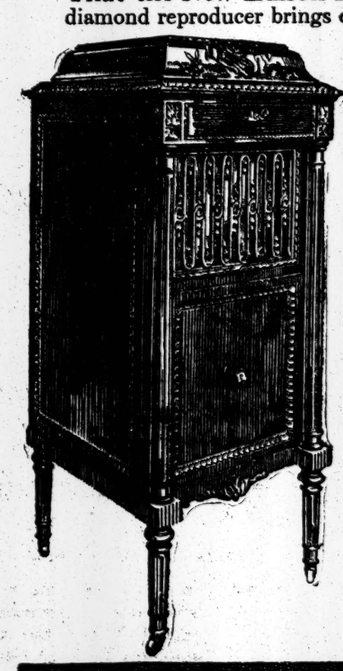
Europe's leading coloratura soprano, will appear tomorrow at the Astor Gallery, Waldorf Astoria Hotel. European critics have said of Miss Verlet, "Sings With Unfaltering Brilliancy", "The New Queen of Song", "The Voice of the Century". She is now making her first tour of America. During five years with the Paris Grand Opera Mlle. Verlet sang leading roles in Faust, Thais, Lucia di Lammermoor, Romeo et Juliette, Dou Giovanni, Lakme. Due to the effects of the Edison Shop in the interest of New York music lovers, Miss Verlet has contracted to appear on the program in conjunction with the New Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph.

The Edison Shop feels that its own beautiful quarters will be inadequate for the many people who will be interested in this unusual performance. It has, therefore, engaged the Astor Gallery to accommodate the audience. A splendid opportunity to hear this great prima donna in an experiment of the most absorbing interest to the musical public.

First Miss Verlet will sing a song herself. Then it will be repeated upon the New Edison. And then she will sing along with the phonograph, permitting you to hear both the original and the reproduction successfully.

Miss Verlet Will Sing Caro Nome—Rigoletto

We have said that Mr. Edison has made of the phonograph a real musical instrument. That the New Edison Record preserves all the overtones that give character and richness. That the wonderful diamond reproducer brings out the fine shades with absolute fidelity. That the New Edison re-creates the music of the artist—that its tone is human, natural, true to life.



Now you may judge for yourself. Hear the actual comparison. Close your eyes and see if you can distinguish the original from the reproduction.

Call at the Edison Shop for a Complimentary Ticket

This ticket will admit you to the Astor Gallery to hear this interesting experiment. The final proof of Mr. Edison's great musical triumph.

Such fidelity of tone, we know, is even more than the public demands from an artificial sound. But we are glad to perform this daring experiment because it demonstrates better than anything can the superiority of the Edison tone—the truth of our statement that Mr. Edison has secured "perfect reproduction of sound."

Miss Verlet will appear at 3 P. M. tomorrow in the Astor Gallery, Waldorf Hotel, 5th Ave. and 34th Street. Call at the Edison Shop today for a complimentary ticket.

Would you please be so kind as to send me some recipes for preserving peaches, apricots, cherries, strawberries and pineapples? I have tried several of your recipes that appeared in the June number of The Woman's Magazine and found them to be delicious.

As I am only a young housekeeper I have never made any preserves or jellies, so I am going to try my luck for the first time this year.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR KATY SYSTEM

Big Western Road Unable to Meet Notes — Directors Cooperate in Friendly Suits.

ACTION IN TWO STATES

President Schaff Receiver of Both Corporations — Efforts to Refinance System to Continue.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 27.—The "Katy" railway system, embracing the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, a Kansas corporation, and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway of Texas today went into the hands of a receiver.

This change, affecting a system with an aggregate mileage of 3,800, was brought about by independent orders filed in the United States District Court at St. Louis and at Dallas, and was a result of a friendly agreement between certain creditors and the management. Charles E. Schaff, President of both roads, was named sole receiver of each.

The order throwing the Kansas corporation into the hands of a receiver was signed jointly by Circuit Judge Elmer B. Adams and District Judge David P. Dyer. The order affecting the Texas lines was signed by District Judge E. R. Meek of Dallas.

The receivership order signed here was issued on the petition of two creditors—the Railway Steel Springs Company of New Jersey, with a claim of $16,000, and D. B. Hussey of St. Louis, who had a claim of $135,000 for ties and equipment. The order issued in Texas was granted on the petition of Mr. Hussey, acting for himself and other creditors.

The railway company filed an answer to the petitions here, consenting to the appointment of a receiver and admitting the allegations of the petitions as to the inability of the road to meet obligations already matured.

The receivership suit was filed by agreement with the Directorate of the railroad. The failure of holders of $950,000 face value of $19,000,000 outstanding two-year 5 per cent. notes to consent to an extension for one year at 6 per cent. brought about the decision of the railway management to throw the road into the courts to prevent the filing of individual suits that might result in a disintegration of the system.

Holders of $200,000 of the two-year notes recently filed an attachment against the railway in Boston. Similar suits were threatened by Western noteholders, and this, it is thought, hastened the petition for a receivership.

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 27.—Judge Meek late today appointed A. B. Flannery of Dallas as Master in Chancery to pass on all claims and accounts of the Texas lines of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas. Both Master in Chancery and receiver will report to the Federal Court in Dallas. Each will operate independently of the other.

Will Continue Refinancing Plans.

The Missouri, Kansas & Texas receivership caused little surprise in the financial district. The system had been in financial straits for some time, but only ten days ago officials of the company expressed the hope that they would be able to avoid a receivership pending new financing. The receivership was said to be the outcome of a hasty meeting of some of the Directors in this city last Saturday.

The Directors of the Kansas company, of which Frank Trumbull is Chairman, late yesterday afternoon authorized this statement:

"The Directors and officers were hopeful last Spring—when they asked for an extension of these notes for one year—that they would be able to work out a plan of refinancing that would enable the company to pay them off, and they have been continuously since then endeavoring to accomplish this; but, owing to apathy of investors toward railroads and to heavy losses in the Galveston storm and continued floods in the Southwest, which have impaired the earnings of the company and increased its expenses, it has been impossible to accomplish what the Directors set out to do. They are, however, still proceeding, in co-operation with bankers, with the preparation of a plan for readjusting the finances of the company and providing for its future requirements."

Statement by the Bankers.

It was about ten days ago that new banking interests, J. & W. Seligman & Co., and Hallgarten & Co., sent representatives over the Missouri, Kansas & Texas lines with a view of refinancing. These two houses yesterday issued this statement:

"In connection with the receivership of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, Messrs. Hallgarten & Co. and J. & W. Seligman & Co., stated that they had undertaken to prepare a plan of readjustment of the finances of the company at the request of the Board of Directors of the company; that in undertaking the preparation of the plan they had been in hope that a receivership might be avoided; that they had, however, already made such material progress that, notwithstanding the receivership, they hoped before long to submit a plan to the various interests which would be affected by a reorganization."

Protective committees for the various bond issues will now be formed, and the new bankers, it is believed, will deal with these various committees in drawing up their plan of reorganization. The first of the protective committees in the field is that being formed by the Columbia Trust Company for the holders of the extended notes of the railway company. Willard V. King, President of the trust company, will be Chairman of the committee. It is understood that A. J. Hemphill of the Guaranty Trust Company is forming another committee.

The gross earnings of the road in 1914 were about $31,500,000, and the net earnings about $9,000,000. The fixed charges amounted to $7,000,000. In 1914, the worst year in the history of the road, the surplus after meeting charges was only $539,000, compared with $2,316,000 in 1913. Total assets as of June 30, 1914, were $265,508,600. The funded debt was $171,613,500.

For the last two weeks the preferred and common stock, as well as the bonds, have been selling off. The preferred sold yesterday, just before the news of the receivership was flashed on the ticker, at 11, and the common at 5, both new low records for the year. The Dutch have been large investors in the property and many of the securities are said to be held abroad.

Bayonne Strike Declared Off.

Six hundred employes of the Safety Insulated Wire and Cable Company in Bayonne returned to work yesterday, and the plant resumed operations. The company granted the men a 12½ per cent. increase in wages and a nine-hour day. They demanded eight hours and a 15 per cent. raise. The officials of the Babcock & Wilcox Company, manufacturers of boilers, announce yesterday that the 1,000 employes would obtain an eight-hour day Oct. 1. They have been working nine and ten hours. The men did not strike, but sent a request to the officials for shorter hours.

POISON AS SAMPLES OF A NERVE TONIC

Philadelphia Store Mixes Bichloride with Medicine Draughts.

TWO VICTIMS IN HOSPITAL

Solution Used for Cleansing Glasses Was Accidentally Mingled with the Medicine.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—A solution of bichloride of mercury, used to disinfect drinking glasses, accidentally was mixed with samples of a nerve tonic and distributed free to more than fifty persons in a Market Street department store here today. Two of those who drank the solution are known to be in hospitals suffering from the effects of the poison, and many more are believed to be affected in their homes.

On the counter where the nerve tonic was sold three bowls were kept, two filled with water and a third containing the poison solution. After the store patrons had tasted the tonic the demonstrators were supposed to dip the used glasses first in one bowl of water, then in the poison solution, and then in the other bowl of water in order to destroy all germs and make the glasses clean for use again.

No one concerned in the matter knows exactly how the bichloride solution got into the tonic mixture, but, at any rate, the poison liquid was distributed to all men, women, and children who asked for it for more than an hour before the situation was apparent. Dozens of persons sipped the tonic, and when some said they wouldn't buy it at any price, because it was too bitter, an investigation was started which led to the discovery of the mistake.

Joseph Raker, supervisor for the firm which manufactures the tonic, visited the counter and tasted the liquid himself when he learned of the complaints.

"It was bitter as gall," he said, "and I immediately surmised that the young women demonstrating the tonic had accidentally mixed the bichloride in it somehow."

WANTS PEERLESS MOTOR CO.

Negotiations Reported in Cleveland, but Stoutly Denied Here.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—Negotiations are under way for the purchase by the General Motors Company of the Peerless Motor Car Company. The General Motors Company is willing to take the property at once at an independent expert's appraisal, which probably would be between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000, exclusive of other assets.

The Peerless Company is reported to have cash on hand in excess of $3,000,000. About twenty motor trucks now are shipped daily to the Allies. When the delivery of the Russian order for four-wheel-drive cars commences about thirty cars will be shipped every day.

The General Motors Company desires the Peerless property as an Eastern assembly plant. There is a hint that others besides the General Motors Company desire the Peerless property.

W. C. Durant, President of the Chevrolet Motor Company of this city and one of the largest stockholders of the General Motors Company, denied yesterday that there was any truth in the reported sale of the Peerless Company to the General Motors Company. Mr. Durant said that not only had no sale been made, but that there had not even been negotiations looking to such a transaction.

NO DELAY FOR HILLSTROM.

His Execution Will Take Place Oct. 1, Gov. Spry Tells State Department

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Sept. 27.—Joseph Hillstrom will be put to death by shooting Oct. 1, in accordance with the sentence of the court, Governor William Spry today notified the State Department at Washington.

A telegram of the Swedish Minister to the United States, addressed to the State Department and forwarded to Governor Spry, suggested that delay might be advisable because of protests received by the Minister that Hillstrom had not had a fair trial. The telegram sent by Governor Spry after a meeting of the Board of Pardons asserted that the trial of Hillstrom had been fair and every opportunity had been extended to him to prove his innocence.

Hillstrom was convicted of killing J. C. Morrison, a grocer, and his 18-year-old son.

Receiver for Jared Flagg.

Judge Charles M. Hough yesterday appointed William B. Winslow of 55 Liberty Street as receiver for Jared Flagg, the broker, convicted of using the mails to defraud. The appointment was made in an equity suit brought by Ellsworth E. Cook on behalf of himself and other customers of Flagg.

TRAINING REGIMENT GETS HEADQUARTERS

Business Men Effect Organization and Open an Office in Nassau Street.

ROBERT BACON IS CHAIRMAN

National System of Camps and Provision for Schooling Citizens Now Aimed At.

Permanent organization of the Business Men's Training Regiment, for the purpose of encouraging "a system of military training camps throughout the nation and of assisting to provide a reasonable amount of military training for the citizens of the United States," has been effected, and headquarters have been opened at 31 Nassau Street. Robert Bacon, former Ambassador to France, who was a Sergeant in the regiment at Plattsburg, is the Chairman of the Organization Committee, among the members of which are Mayor Mitchel, who was a Lieutenant in Company A, and George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, who was the regimental color bearer.

The permanent committee is made up of the following members:

New York—Philip A. Carroll, Grenville Clark, Johnson De Forest, Dudley F. Malone, V. S. Merle-Smith, Mayor Mitchel, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and Horace C. Stebbins, New York; Willard D. Straight, Westbury, L. I.; ex-Senator J. Mayhew Wainwright, Rye; A. C. Goodyear, Buffalo; De Lancey K. Jay, Albany.

New England—George E. Buxton, Providence, R. I.; E. T. Broadhurst, Springfield, Mass.; J. W. Farley, Thomas D. Lavelle, Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., and Benjamin Joy, Boston; Leslie Soule, Nashua, N. H.

Pennsylvania—William J. Clothier and G. W. Pepper, Philadelphia; Howard H. Henry, Fort Washington; David A. Reed, Pittsburgh.

Maryland and District of Columbia—James Bruce, Ruxton, Md.; Robert Garrett and Redmond C. Stewart, Baltimore; Basil Niles, Washington.

The South—William Marshall Bullitt, Louisville, Ky.; Landon Thomas, Augusta, Ga.; Roger A. Derby, Jackson Springs, N. C.

The West—William R. Glasgow, St. Louis; H. B. Kirtland, Toledo, Ohio; John S. Miller, Jr., Winnetka, Ill.; George F. Porter, Chicago.

"The full committee," the announcement mailed to the men of the Business Men's Regiment reads, "has had no opportunity to meet formally, but informally the following tentative plans have been outlined:

"In the first place the work to be done seems to fall into two general divisions. On the one hand is the work to be done planning a national system of camps for 1916 and future years, and co-operating with the War Department to obtain enlistments for the camps and put them on a permanent basis. It should be entirely practicable to have a number of sectional camps next year throughout the country to afford training to a large body of men.

"On the other hand is the field of regimental activities. The camp now going on at Plattsburg is organized as Companies I, K, L, and M of our regiment, constituting the Third Battalion. The regiment is to be officially and permanently known as 'The First Training Regiment.' Thus we have a homogeneous body of nearly 1,800 men united in a strong common interest, and there is a widespread demand that measures be taken to preserve the integrity of this force."

STEVENS INSTITUTE OPENS.

Three New Instructors Have Been Added to the Faculty.

The Fall term of Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, opened yesterday, with a total attendance of 450 and a freshman class of 187. This, together with the large increase of the year before, has made it necessary for the college to make additions to equipment during the Summer. Three new lecture rooms have been added.

Dr. Donald Mackenzie has been appointed instructor in French and Spanish in the department of modern languages. R. G. Erwin, recently of the General Electric Company, has been appointed laboratory assistant in the department of chemistry. W. B. Wachtler, M. E., will be laboratory assistant in the department of experimental engineering.

In the Carnegie Laboratory of Engineering special testing rooms have been constructed for use in connection with heat experiments.

Lost Ticket Leads to His Death.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 27.—James Ruddy of Perth Amboy was put off a Central Railroad train at Tremley Saturday because he could not find his ticket. While he was walking the ties to his home he was struck by an express train and killed. A search of Ruddy's clothes at the morgue here today showed that the ticket had slipped through a hole in his pocket, and was caught in the lining of his coat.

The New Idea in Millinery

WE have been asked by hundreds of patrons to explain just what we mean by "The New Idea in Millinery." We answer that this original and exclusive idea of Macy's is new in three important respects.

First: In eliminating the arbitrary profits at which millinery is sold in other stores—particularly in the three-thousand-odd specialty shops of this city. The price of Chapeaux La Marquise is based on sense, not sentiment.

Second: In creating at one fixed price an assemblage of hats remarkable for the range of selection offered, and producing, through Standardization of prices, the most approved styles of each season at the absolute minimum of cost.

Third: In enabling all women of discriminating taste to follow the new ruling of Fashion—a different hat with every gown.

At the same time see our new creations at $12.89, $15.89, $19.89 and $25.50. Like Chapeaux La Marquise, they are absolutely incomparable in the City at their prices.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT BEGINS AT CAPITAL

Washington Crowded with Veterans and Their Relatives, Who Will Celebrate All Week.

BIG PARADE WEDNESDAY

President Orders Closing of All Departments on That Day—Notable Thinning Seen in the Ranks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The encampment of veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will last till the end of the week, began here today. President Wilson this morning signed an order closing all departments on Wednesday so that employes of the Government might witness the parade that day in celebration of the semi-centennial of the grand parade of the victorious Union troops returning north in 1865.

Washington today was crowded with veterans and their families. The older public buildings drew most of the veterans, who were eager to see places that would remind them of their return from the civil war. The day's ceremonies began with the formal opening, by Commander Palmer, of Camp Emery, official headquarters of the reunion, established in the old census building, near the capitol and the welcoming by the commander and his staff of Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, retired, who is to be the grand marshal of the parade next Wednesday.

In the afternoon a patriotic concert was given by the United States Marine Band at the Pension Building. A number of the veterans went out on the Potomac to visit the twelve warships which the United States Navy has detailed here for the reunion. The forts around the Capital were illuminated tonight and will continue so all week.

But though the streets are full of merry old men and their relatives, the small representation of many of the famous old units shows the work of time. But four men survive, for instance, of the 124 employes of the Post Office Department organized as the Post Office Guard at the outbreak of the war, and only one of these is now in the department's service—R. S. Lawrenson of this city, who is 71 years old. It was said today that there are only two survivors of the men who organized the G. A. R.

Eight survivors of Lincoln's body guard answered to their names this morning at Fifteen and D Street, N. W., not far from the White House, where the guard quartered its horses during the war. Dr. George C. Ashman, dean of the Faculty of the Western Reserve Medical College at Cleveland, Ohio, presided.

A unique couple at the reunion is composed of Major Martin Suter of Ohio, aged 96, and his son, Rufus W. Suter of Baltimore, aged 72. Father and son enlisted together in the Fourth Maryland Regiment, in which the father was promptly made Captain. His son, who was then only 18, afterward became Sergeant.

In the year ended June 30, 1914, the daily average collection was 505,081, while the year ended June 30 last the average daily collection was 497,152.

The average daily collection at this station was 92,546, while the report for the year ended last June shows a daily average collection of 85,-900. Sands Street, Brooklyn, had a total of 1,585,716, with an average daily collection of 4,664, while the average daily collection for the previous year was 4,772. The Art of being inconspicuous

¶ Unquestionably, the best test of the well-dressed man is to be inconspicuous but not unnoticed.

¶ It is the experience of men who wear Saks Clothes that they neither arrest attention nor escape it.

¶ Even our extremest models show the influence of a softening, refining touch, in the manner of their making.

¶ They may be radical, but never ridiculous; extreme, but never eccentric; faddish, but never freakish; drastic, but never discordant.

"It is a story to whet and revive the appetite of the most jaded consumer of fiction: a story that throbs with high spirits of adventure-questing, healthy, romantic, optimistic, resilient youth. . . . Realism may be colored and illumined by the romantic vision of youth, as Mr. Lewis shows. The interest of his story never slackens. It is crowded with incident and the characters are so human, and are drawn with such fine sympathy and genial humor, that they linger long in the memory." — Pittsburgh Press.

"For Love and Art I've Lived"

"Vissi d'arte e d'amor" (Tosca)

SHE stands apart—Fremstad—that queen of great emotion and of song. Her lover is about to die and she—to save him—must make the last, the shameful sacrifice. Weeping she sings "For Love and Art I've Lived"—the song of her career. That song touches the very depths of human feeling. It trembles with emotion. It is sacred as a prayer.

Slowly its throated glories melt away. The great singer has ceased. She has given you the very jewel of her noble art—so tender, so delicate, with all its moving, throbbing impulse. Ah! Could we but hear this masterpiece of song reproduced in its true beauty by a phonograph!

For splendid and wonderful invention though it be, the phonograph has never, until now, done full justice to a voice like Olive Fremstad's.

But now! Now we have the means for immortalizing Art.

"....These rounded living tone-depths, indeed, are new to the phonograph."

The Aeolian-Vocalion

"THE PHONOGRAPH THAT CALLS FORTH NEW BEAUTIES FROM YOUR RECORDS"

For the first time, the Aeolian-Vocalion draws from the record the subtlest bloom of its beauty by developing from it the most delicate tonal tints which the latest scientific discoveries—embodied in the Vocalion—discovered how to bring out.

So its new and wonderful Sound Box develops from the record a tone-body of wonderful purity and delicacy over the whole range of tone—high or low. These rounded, living tone-depths indeed are new to the phonograph—just as are the delicately characteristic "woody" tones of flutes, etc., the "stringed" quality of harp and violin. They are all produced in utter verity by the Vocalion's wonderful Sound Box which develops them, and by its new revolutionary Symphonetic Horn which preserves them—unsullied and unclouded—to the ear.

A Great, New Phonograph Feature

The Vocalion, too, by its new and wonderful device—the Graduola—allows you to make each record sound like a different rendering by the same artist each time you play it—melting the sound away to the graduated pressure of your hand, swelling it forth again to full strength; but this, however, only if you want to do so.

Finally, the Vocalion is physically beautiful. It possesses the coloring and finish of the highest-grade pianos. It comes in art shapes. It harmonizes with the most expensive of art furnishings.

VOCALIONS may be bought for as low as $90—and for payments as low as $5 a month. We will even make exchange arrangements for your present instrument. And we invite you to hear your own records played on the Vocalion—so that it may definitely prove Vocalion superiority by calling out the subtle beauties that were buried in them—"till the Vocalion came."

Autumn Clothes for Autumn Winds

For the Hunt Club,
The Stubble,
The North Woods
and the Links

THE whirr of the partridge is in the air. The moose are calling. The dead leaves are falling on the seventeenth green. It's getting chilly motoring at night through the Westchester lanes. Autumn has arrived in the country. It is calling as never before for Autumn sporting clothes—for the loose, well-fitting, smart, comfortable, thoroughbred clothes of the country gentleman and gentlewoman.

The "Swithin"
Rubberized Silk Coat for Golf and Other Sports.

Sporting clothes have had a rapid development in America. Clothes for the neighborhood hunter in days gone by meant a rough-and-ready makeshift—half Davy Crockett and half last year's suit.

But the horizon of country life has widened on this side the ocean. It no longer means the cornfields and marshes at the edge of town. The hunter looks to Maine and Arkansas and the Canadian woods.

The motorist looks to trans-continental roadways. Every day on the avenue you see motor licenses from Georgia and Ohio and California.

There are over ninety country clubs around New York city alone. Girl golfers from Long Island think nothing of running out to the tournaments at Onwentsia or Westward Ho. The suburbs of the cities, from Portland to Portland, have literally merged into the country, as if we were one big county in England, three thousand miles wide!

Country gentlemen, at heart, every one of us, at last paying close attention to the proprieties and comforts of the sporting clothes that a country gentleman should wear!

It has remained for the house that has earned its title, "The Greatest Sporting Goods Store in the World," to develop the Greatest Sporting Clothes Department in the World, to meet this situation, for men as well as women.

Here is a complete Sporting Clothes Store for Men, occupying an entire floor of the big Abercrombie & Fitch Building, surpassing anything ever before known—embracing a custom department stocked with a superb collection of special sporting fabrics, brought together from the ends of the earth.

Ready-for-service apparel for every outdoor sport of Autumn and Winter—not one model of a kind, or one fabric for a purpose, but a wide assortment for each particular sport, designed and tailored with an expert knowledge of that sport. Add to this a full knowledge, gained from daily association, of the special desires of international leaders in the various sports, and you will understand the difference between these Abercrombie & Fitch genuine sporting clothes and those which merely adopt a name.

Shooting Suits
With Open Plait in back of Coat and under the sleeves.
(Thorntweeds, Covey Cloth, Homespuns and Corduroys.)

An A. & F. Autumn Golf Suit for Women
One example from the most complete line of Sportswomen's Clothes in the world.

Nine tailors who had never been out to shoot would have great trouble in making a sportsman's suit. By no magic could it ever acquire the odor of swirling leaves and wood smoke and frying bacon.

Around the camp fire in the North Woods there is a regulation in dress—regulation in fabric—a quick recognition and appreciation of the genuine thing.

In the duck blind there is another regulation equipment—comfortable, fitting the surroundings—a recognized fashion resulting from the experience and judgment of thousands of hunters.

At the country club there is rapidly developing a steadier adherence to the rules of dress which have obtained on the Scotch and English links, replacing the unattractive, coatless negligee of former years.

The Abercrombie & Fitch clothing organization has been assembled gradually to meet the ever-increasing, very exact requirements of sportsmen. A number of fabrics have been specially woven for us, abroad and

English Knickerbocker Golf Suit

The "Laurentian"
Country Club and Lounge Suit
Made in Six different sporting fabrics.

in this country, for the particular requirements of such a clientele.

"Thorntweed" is the latest of these, in different weights and in five different heather colorings; admirably adapted to the golfer, the hunter, and the motorist.

It is as near imperishable as a fabric can be made, turning thorns as readily as it does water, and presenting an unusually smart appearance. No other establishment will present it.

"Covey Cloth" is another—for the rider as well as the hunter. It closely resembles drab, suede leather, but is much lighter and more comfortable.

"Engladine" cloth, impervious to water and wind, is another exclusive fabric of this house for the North Woods and Winter sports.

Hand-woven tweeds and homespuns, Scotch mixtures in sporting patterns, plaids and checks of suitable texture, corduroys and velveteens—everything you would expect to find in the largest assortment of sporting clothes in the world is here.

You may obtain your Autumn golf suit, knickerbocker style, made of the proper, proven material, ready-to-wear, but fitting you as well as your best tailor could do it, at $25 and up to $88. Or you may have it with long trousers if you choose.

A country-house lounge suit, which also serves on the links, at $25 to $35.

An all-purpose country suit of tweeds or homespun, at $30.

A shooting-suit or golf-suit of "Thorntweed," $35 or $40.

A velveteen English hunting coat, which serves smartly indoors after the hunt, at $18.

A pair of Covey cloth breeches at $15.

Big, handsome sporting overcoats at $30, $35, and $40.

Which briefly gives you an idea of prices, but little conception of the latitude of selection. Where a few other establishments might offer you a selection of from two or three suits, here you make your choice from a dozen or a score.

Sporting hats or caps for every costume; shirts, hosiery, gloves, neckwear—a wonderfully complete stock, everything manufactured expressly for sporting purposes.

And to foot it all—the shoes. Any well-posted sportsman will tell you that his comfort and success depends first upon his feet, and that the Abercrombie & Fitch sporting shoe department easily stands first throughout the world.

CORROBORATES ROAN LETTER ON FRANK

Plea for Clemency Made by Judge's Brother Now Published in Georgia.

JUDGE HAD DOUBTED GUILT

Brother Relates Conversations of Same Import, Combating Charge That Letter Was Forged.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 27.—It has been charged that the letter in which Judge Roan of the Fulton Superior Court expressed doubt as to the guilt of Leo M. Frank and which was written shortly before his death, was a forgery. J. T. Roan, a prominent citizen of Jesup, Ga., and a brother of the late Judge Roan, was among those who appealed to the Governor and the Prison Commission for commutation of Frank's sentence, Mr. Roan basing his appeal on a conversation he had with his brother in March, 1914, in which Judge Roan said the murder of Mary Phagan did not impress him as a white man's crime, but as that of a negro.

The Augusta Chronicle will print tomorrow the Roan letter to the Governor and the Prison Commission for the first time. Here is the letter:

Jesup, Ga., May 24, 1915.

To his Excellency, the Governor of Georgia, and to the Prison Board, Atlanta, Ga:

Gentlemen: In re application of Leo M. Frank for executive clemency.

In the exercise of my prerogative as a citizen of Georgia I appeal to your Excellency and to the Prison Board to extend executive clemency to Leo M. Frank, now under sentence of death.

Judge L. S. Roan, who presided at the trial of Frank, was my brother, and during March, 1914, visited me in my home at St. Petersburg, Fla., where I was then living. He discussed the case and the trial with me, and my request for executive clemency is based upon the impressions I received from him during our conversation. I will not undertake to quote his words, but the following are a few of the impressions which were made upon me by his conversation:

The impression conveyed was that a spirit of mob violence permeated the whole atmosphere of Atlanta and even entered the courtroom and manifested itself in various ways; that it was totally beyond the power of any man to stop or stem its spirit, and that the trial was had under these conditions which were wholly unusual.

The impression also that I received from him was that Frank had accounted for every moment of his time on the day of the murder, except for a few minutes, and that in the morning and afternoon Frank kept a very intricate set of books in perfect shape, and he could not conceive that a man of Frank's disposition could have done this had he committed the crime.

I got the further impression from him that Conley was there that morning and was drinking, and that as the little girl came downstairs the negro could have killed he, and hidden her body; and, further, that the crime, taken as a whole, did not impress him as being a white man's crime, but more likely the crime of a negro.

He further left the impression upon me that the statement which he made at the time the motion for a new trial was refused did not explain fully his feelings on the subject, but that, since the jury had passed upon the evidence, it was not his duty to do so, but that the evidence itself, taken as a whole, left grave doubt in his mind as to Frank's guilt and that in passing upon the motion for a new trial he only considered the errors of law and did not pass himself upon the evidence, but that he was very sure that the Supreme Court would grant Frank a new trial, and that this would be better for Frank than for him to do it.

He also made the impresston upon me that the case rested upon circumstantial evidence furnished by a negro by the name of Jim Conley, and that Conley had made four different statements, all very different from each other, any of which the jury could have believed.

Taking my brother's conversation as a whole, I am sure that he must have entertained grave doubt as to Frank's guilt.

My own person belief is, taking all the circumstances surrounding the case as I learned them from my brother and others, it would be a calamity to the honor and dignity of the State or Georgia, to hang Frank, and in my opinion it would be a blot from which the State and all law-abiding citizens would suffer immeasurably.

For these reasons I sincerely trust that the Prison Board will recommend and that the Governor will commute the death sentence imposed upon Leo M. Frank. Respectfully submitted.

J. T. ROAN.

FIRE IN PACKING HOUSES.

Entire Block in Jamaica Threatened in High Wind.

Fire early yesterday threatened the block at Rockaway Road and Division Street, Jamaica, where the meat houses and other industries have their headquarters. The fire started in the barn back of the Armour packing house. The firemen and watchmen managed to get all of the horses and wagons out, but the barn was destroyed.

The flames spread to the Armour building, and the roof and walls were damaged. The flames leaped to the Sulzberger plant and the outside of the storehouse was burned and charred for a distance of eighty-five feet. There was a stiff wind blowing, but Chief Stone managed to keep the flames under control. The loss is about $4,000.

COOL TO PRENDERGAST.

Teachers' League Not Enthusiastic Over His Address.

Controller Prendergast, speaking last night at a meeting of the Teachers' League in the auditorium of the Washington Irving High School, undertook to tell the teachers the "relations which should exist between the teaching force and the city authorities." The teachers were not enthusiastic over his remarks, and one man, who said that his name was Schneider, was ejected from the hall. After his address the Controller volunteered to answer questions, and so many were sent to the platform that he had to abandon the task.

The Controller began by saying that he wanted to explode the fallacy that city officials should not discuss education. "The point of many persons, some in the education system and some in the administration, is that if the elaborate system of education is costing more money than seems wise, the elaborate system should be curtailed. Others believe, and I am one, that it is better to grind into the minds of the child the fundamental principles of education rather than spreading him over so large a field. It seems to some of us that it is better to keep to a simpler system that to one that is not so effective. It is time to see that money spent in education should bring better results."

In answer to the query whether he would voluntarily sacrifice a part of their salary, he said that salaries were fixed upon the basis of whether the amount paid was equal to the character of the service required.

"I would be willing to submit my requirements, ability, and salary to any board of standardization," he said," and I would be perfectly willing to submit to a reduction, but I do not think a reduction would be ordered."

GANG ATTACKS A WOMAN.

Beat Baker's Wife and Drag Her Into an Empty Stable.

Mrs. Mary Williams of 1,588 Third Avenue, wife of a baker employed on Blackwell's Island, when returning to her home last night after visiting her husband, was attacked at First Avenue and 110th Street by men, who beat and gagged her. They dragged her to an empty stable near by, where she was attacked.

Patrolman William Cohen of the East 104th Street Police Station heard her screams, when she managed to loosen the gag. According to Cohen, he found nearly thirty men in the stable, who fled at his approach, but he managed to arrest one man, who he says attempted to escape through the front door. The prisoner said he was Frank Muscolina, 18 years old, of 226 East 109th St. He was locked up in the East 104th Street Station.

Detectives of the Third Branch Bureau questioned Mrs. Williams, and Dr. Jennings of Harlem Hospital attended her. They learned that a pair of diamond earrings, a diamond ring, and a wedding ring, all valued at $100, had been taken from her.

COLORADO EDITOR SLAIN.

Mitchell of Walsenburg Had Led Fight Against Local Politicians.

Special to The New York Times.

WALSENBURG, Col., Sept. 27.—Robert Mitchell, editor of The Walsenburg Independent, was shot and killed while alone in his home last night. Mrs. Mitchell and Miss Blanche Yopres saw the murderer running away from the house as they returned from a shopping trip. Posses with bloodhounds are searching the mines for the slayer.

Mr. Mitchell had been leading the fight in the State courts to unseat Sheriff Jeff Farr, head of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company's political machine in Fluerfano County. He had in his possession evidence offered to the Supreme Court alleging that Farr had been illegally elected. The editor intended to present this evidence to the Federal Grand Jury in October. He had often been warned that his fearless opposition to alleged corruption would result in his death.

FIGHT IN FREIGHT STRIKE.

Austrians Attack Italians Working in Their Places on the West Shore.

Striking freight handlers and strikebreakers engaged in a fight on a hillside above the West Shore Railroad yards in West New York, N. J., yesterday afternoon, in which many stones were thrown and several shots were fired. John Furlong, 26 years old, of Broadway and Sixteenth Street, West New York, a clerk employed by the railroad, who was with the strikebreakers when they were attacked, was knocked unconscious by a blow on the head from a flying stone.

A revolver from which two shots had been fired was found by his side, but when he had regained consciousness he denied that he had used the weapon, and the police assumed that it had been dropped by one of the strikers or strikebreakers, all of whom fled when the first policeman came into view. According to the police, the strikers are Austrians for the most part, while the strikebreakers are Italians. The fight last evening was the first violence since the beginning of the strike, about two weeks ago.

MRS. HIPKINS TRACES RECREANT HUSBAND

Capt. Howard Hipkins of the 71st Regt. Deserted Her 20 Months Ago, She Says.

YOUNGER WOMAN IN CASE

Wife Has Copy of a Marriage License from Texas and Talks of Bigamy and a Divorce.

Mrs. Jessie E. Hipkins of 501 West 156th Street has asked the District Attorney's office for aid in finding her husband, Howard Hipkins, who was formerly Captain of Company 1 in the Seventy-first Regiment. At her home, where she is living with her mother, Mrs. Hipkins yesterday spread out on a table a mass of letters, telegrams, photographs, and documents, all of which concerned her missing husband. She admitted that she had constituted herself a private detective agency ever since her husband disappeared about twenty months ago.

Among the documents was a letter from a Houston lawyer advising her that Howard Hipkins had procured a marriage license in Houston, Texas, on Aug. 24 last, and another from the Houston Chief of Police telling her that the marriage was performed on Aug. 24, the same date, by a Justice of the Peace. She sent back to the officials in Houston for a certified copy of the marriage license, and this she received last night.

"I think my case is fairly complete now," Mrs. Hipkins said. "I suppose I'll have to prosecute him for bigamy first, and then I'll be able to get a divorce from him without much trouble. The next step is to find him."

The name that appeared on the certified marriage license with Hipkins's name was that of a young woman stenographer who formerly worked in the same office he was employed in while in New York.

"I've traced her, too," said Mrs. Hipkins, "and have found that she has returned to her home on Staten Island since the marriage, and that he has been seen there several times."

Mrs. Hipkins is 39 years old, a stanch suffragist, and was Vice Chairwoman of her district for some time. She is also a Christian Scientist. Her missing husband had been a Captain in the Seventy-first Regiment for about four years before he left, she said, and he was Corresponding Secretary of the Military Athletic League of New York. He is the son of the Rev. Frederick Southgate Hipkins, who was once rector of St. John's Episcopal Church in Larchmont, and later a hotel keeper in Larchmont, and who is now living at the Washington Irving Apartments, Broadway and 151st Street.

FOR SUFFRAGE IN JERSEY.

New York Women Helping the Cause in a Sister State.

A new organization known as the "New Jersey Next Campaign Committee of New York Suffragists," with Mrs. Henry Bruere, wife of the City Chamberlain at its head, began work yesterday at the Jersey ferries in the lower part of the city, handing out literature urging the men commuters on their way home from business in New York to be sure and register and vote for the Woman Suffrage Amendment to the New Jersey Constitution on Oct. 19.

On the Executive Committee of the organization are Mrs. Robert Adamson, Miss Jessie Ashley, Miss Bessie F. G. Brainard, Mrs. Bruere, Mrs. John Dewey Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr, Mrs. Emanuel Einstein and Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley.

They have a new automobile for their work, another instance of the good fellowship among women suffragists. The car which is named "Pacific Victory," has been presented to Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, Secretary of the "Jersey Next" Committee, by the women of California and Oregon as their contribution to the Eastern campaign and a thank offering to Mrs. Greeley who campaigned for them in 1911 and 1912. They credit her with being an important factor in their victory.

Mrs. Greeley is speaking every evening in New Jersey and will work in the State until Election Day, making an automobile tour accompanied by Mrs. Bruere.

DOLLAR DAY FOR SUFFRAGE.

Prominent Women Augmenting the Fund for Friday's Count.

Dollar Day of the Woman Suffrage Party is Friday of this week, and Mrs. Mitchel, wife of the Mayor, yesterday presented $1 to the fund. Mrs. Whitman, wife of the Governor, has already given a dollar, and Mrs. Robert Adamson won for the fund a dollar by taking a dare and a swim in Emerald Lake, Brookfield, Conn., the camp of "Big Bill" Edwards, at 6 o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Frederick Nathan has returned from her Summer home at Buckhill Falls, in the Pocono Mountains, with a bank in the shape of a little house which is filled with dollars for Dollar Day. There are so many that they are protruding from the chimney. The money will be counted on Friday.

Alice Riggs Hunt, going from New York to San Francisco, set herself the task of getting a dollar for Dollar Day for every station she passed on her long trip. She has done it. Andrew J. Gallagher, who is running for Mayor of San Francisco on the Labor ticket, gave her a gold piece and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman gave her a dollar.

Baby Kopp a Suffrage Mascot.

Suffragists have a mascot, it was announced yesterday at the headquarters of the Woman Suffrage Party. It is baby Dorothy Kopp, who was born last week in the Hahnemann Hospital. Baby Kopp, with good judgment selected a perfectly good suffragist as a mother, Mrs. Edna Kopp, who is the leader of the Thirtieth Assembly District for the Woman Suffrage Party. It is asserted that the first cries of little Miss Kopp had a strong resemblance to the words: "Votes-for-Women."

Suffrage Art Exhibit Opens.

There was a large attendance at the opening of the Suffrage Art Exhibit, paintings, sketches, bronzes, and work in plaster, at the Macbeth Galleries yesterday. Many prominent people were present. The exhibit will continue to Oct. 16, inclusive. The suffragists are to receive half the proceeds of the sales made.

No One Hurt In N. Y. U. "Rush."

The great September "rush" of the freshmen of New York University was last night definitely stopped by the sophomores, although the first year men broke through the first line of trenches. No one was injured. A pole fifteen feet high had been erected on the athletic field and carefully greased with soap and wax. On top of it fluttered a small sophomore pennant, and around it about ninety of the second year men gathered. After the freshmen had repeatedly failed to scale the pole, Referee R. Moore of the junior class adjudged the sophomores victors.

West Side Churchmen Unite.

A co-operative church organization of the men in the west side churches was formed last night at St. Paul's Methodist Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street. It will be known as the Interchurch Commission of West Side Laymen. Its objects are to cultivate a spirit of fellowship, to engage in community or neighborhood work, to promote boys' work, and to aid evangelical progress. R. H. Tillinghast acted as Chairman, and another meeting to perfect the organization will be held next month.

LEAVING OLD HOME, DIES.

Merchant Kills Himself as Time to Move Approaches.

On the eve of moving his home from an apartment at 296 Central Park West, where he had lived for many years, Samuel Prager, 60 years old, a retired provision merchant of Washington Market, committed suicide yesterday afternoon by inhaling gas in the bathroom of his home. As the time for Mr. Prager and his family to move to New Jersey approached he became increasingly despondent, according to members of the family, who believe that he committed suicide in a final fit of depression at the thought of leaving the familiar surroundings.

Mr. Prager lived with his wife and two step-children, but was alone in the apartment with a servant yesterday afternoon. Shortly after 4 o'clock the servant noticed the odor of gas in the apartment and traced it to the bath room, the door of which was locked. She called William Havens, the superintendent of the building, and Policeman Blumenthal.

Blumenthal found Mr. Prager dead on the floor. There was a cut in his head, believed to have been made when, overcome by the gas, he fell, striking his head on the edge of the tub, but death was caused by asphyxiation. By the dead man's side was found a loaded revolver, which, the police assume, Mr. Prager originally intended to use to destroy himself.

DENIES PRIEST'S CHARGE.

Street Commissioner Says Father Curry's District Is Kept Clean.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Fetherston in reply yesterday to the attack of Father James B. Curry, pastor of St. James's Roman Catholic Church in James Street, said yesterday that he was not a politician and was not playing politics, as the priest charged. He asserted that the district Father Curry had complained of as being unclean had in fact received more attention than any other district in the city.

"The second district, of which Father Curry complains," said the Commissioner, "is cleaned on an average of five times a day, or 1,845 times a year, by machine, hand sweeping, and flushing, as against an average of 1,189 times a year for the 1,500 miles of streets throughout the city. I should think that Father Curry, instead of attacking me, would assist the Street Cleaning Department by educating his parishioners and residents of the district in cleanliness."

B. S. CABLE DIES IN CRASH.

Former Assistant Secretary of Commerce Killed in Auto Accident.

BYFIELD, Mass., Sept. 27.—Benjamin S. Cable of Indianapolis, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor under President Taft, was killed in an automobile accident here today.

Richard T. Crane, Jr., of Chicago, in whose machine Mr. Cable was riding, and Mrs. P. O. Edson, wife of a physician, were slightly hurt.

The accident happened at the junction of the Newburyport Turnpike and the Firetown Road, Mr. Crane's car and the machine in which Mrs. Edson was riding crashing into each other at right angles. The injured were taken to the home of a physician near by.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Benjamin Stickney Cable was President of the United Charities of this city. He was born at Rock Island, Ill., in 1872 and was a son of R. R. Cable, one-time President of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. He took degrees at Yale and Columbia and began the practice of law in Chicago in 1898. He was considered an independent in politics.

MRS. HARRIMAN LOSES SUIT.

Penfield Woman Gets $60,000 Verdict Against Railroad Man's Widow.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 27.—A verdict of $60,000 against Mary W. Harriman and the estate of her husband, Edward H. Harriman, was rendered today by a Sheriff's jury. Mrs. Anna N. Lauer of Penfield is the plaintiff in the suit and she brought the action to recover damages on the ground that false representations were made to her regarding a tract of land in Pike County, Penn., which she purchased from agents of Mr. Harriman in 1904.

No defense was entered by Mrs. Harriman.

W. V. HUNTINGTON DEAD.

ONEONTA, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Willard V. Huntington of Los Angeles, a nephew of the late Collis P. Huntington and brother of Henry E. Huntington, railroad financier, was killed today in a motor car accident near Otsego. In turning out to pass a team his car plunged through a fence and down a fifty-foot embankment.

MEN DIDN'T FLINCH AT FASHION SHOW

Warned They Could Leave Theatre During Display of Lingerie, All Remained.

GOWNS STUNNING AND QUEER

Live Models Demonstrate That Women May Wear Almost Any Style and Be Fashionable.

At 4:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. Belle Armstrong Whitney, who was conducting a fashion show in Cohan's Theatre, stepped to the front of the stage and said:

"If there are any men in the audience not with their wives who wish to leave we will be glad to have them do so quietly now, for we are about to show some things of interest to the women that may embarrass the men."

A moment before, the curtain had risen on a beautiful boudoir scene. In the centre of the stage under a pink canopy was a little French bed and in it a pretty young woman all in fluffy things, for all Manhattan like a Belasco second act.

Mrs. Whitney did not have to call attention to Fire Commissioner Adamson's warning about choosing the nearest exit and WALKING to it. There were many men in the audience, some of them married and others of different conditions of servitude, but not a man flinched. Each clung to his seat and the entertainment progressed.

The young woman arose from the bed, and while maids held a very filmy and diaphanous Liberty scarf before her, Mrs. Whitney proceeded to show the women and their husbands the generally unseen articles of a woman's apparel. This was the point of highest interest in a fashion display to which modistes from all over the city flocked. Statuesque models tripped down a broad staircase into a stage room decidedly futuristic in coloring and conception, wearing gowns, furs, jewelry, and fluffies from the smartest shops of Paris and New York.

There were gowns from Poret, Paquin, Jenny, Buzenet, Callot, Cheruit, Drecoll, Doucet, Fortuny, Goupy, Georgette, Jerome, Lanvin, Martial et Armand, Maurer, Premet, Weeks, and Worth, and from Samuel Florscheimer & Brother, Heller Company, Stein & Blaine, and the Newport Costume Company. There were evening gowns, morning and afternoon costumes, some of them stunning, others adorable and delicious, to quote Mrs Armstrong, and others just queer.

Mrs. Whitney criticised American women for concentrating on a few styles and making them common, and her exhibit was arranged in a manner to illustrate their mistake. Of the sixty or more models shown all were distinctive, and the general impression was that one might wear almost any style and be fashionable. The most striking pointers one gathered from the models and Mrs. Whitney's rapid-fire comment were that furs of all kinds are being used as trimming, that pantalettes are being worn, because, ash she said, they are "modest, comfortable, sanitary, and convenient;" that ribbons are coming in again, that there are more than 250 designs for collars and sleeves, that low-necked and short-sleeved waists are good under short jackets, and that velvet and wool linings are being used in coats and jackets quite often instead of silks and satins.

PRESTON GIBSON ROBBED.

Offers $1,000 Reward for Return of Watch and Manuscript of a Play.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 27.—Preston Gibson has offered a reward of $1,000 for the return of a gold monogrammed watch, important papers, and a manuscript of a one-act submarine play which were stolen from a steel box which he kept in the library of his cottage on Bellevue Avenue. Mr. Gibson had looked over the papers yesterday afternoon before starting for his camp at Lake Edward, Canada, to complete the new play for Miss Maria Doro.

Evidently the theft was the work of some one familiar with the house, for while Mr. Gibson was engaged in another room for a short while, the box was rifled, and the watch and papers taken. The remaining papers were so arranged that the robbery was not discovered until Mr. Gibson went back to the steel box for one of the papers. Detectives were put on the case today.

WERNER HORN FILES APPEAL

Says All Judges Who Have Acted in His Case Erred.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.—Werner Horn, the German Army reservist who tried to blow up the International Bridge between Canada and the United States at Vanceboro, Me., last February, today filed an appeal from the decision of the Federal Court in denying his release on a writ of habeas corpus.

Through his counsel the prisoner questions the regularity of the extradition proceedings by which he was removed from Maine to this State and also the refusal of the court to permit him to invoke the law of nations, or present a commission as an office in the German Army in defense of his actions. Horn makes a general allegation of error by all the Judges and Magistrates who have acted in the proceedings since his arrest.

The appeal will be heard by the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, which begins a sitting here next Monday. In the meantime Horn will remain in the East Cambridge Jail, where he is awaiting trial on the indictment charging him with illegal transportation of dynamite from New York to Vanceboro.

Receiver Franklin Brings Suit.

P. A. S. Franklin, as receiver of the International Mercantile Marine Company, yesterday brought suit in the Admiralty Branch of the Federal District Court to recover damages of $25,000 from the Hamburg-American Line. The steamship New York of the American Line and the Pretoria of the Hamburg-America Line collided in a fog early on the morning of June 13, 1914. The mishap, Receiver Franklin alleges in the complaint, was due to the negligence of the officers navigating the Pretoria. He says the Pretoria's bow penetrated the hull of the New York six feet.

Denies Dock Strike Impends.

Reported statements by union labor officials that a strike of 15,000 longshoremen was pending along the Manhattan and Brooklyn waterfronts were denied yesterday by T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Association. Negotiations are pending with several of the steamship lines for the union scale of wages, he said, and arrangements are being made for organizing certain of the non-union longshoremen, but a strike is not contemplated.

SLAYER SEEKS CITIZENSHIP.

Sichinsky, Who Assassinated Austrian Governor, Surrenders Here.

Can a fugitive from a foreign Government wanted for political assassination become a citizen of the United States? This question will be decided by the American Government in the case of Miroslau Sichinsky, who shot and killed Count Andreas Pototsky, the Austrian Governor of Galicia, on April 12, 1908, and who surrendered himself yesterday to Frederick C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration.

Sichinsky, who has been in this country eight months, is the first political refugee to surrender himself to this Government, according to his lawyer, Simon O. Pollock of 302 Broadway. Commissioner Howe will hear the case in the near future, and meantime Sichinsky is paroled in the custody of Mr. Pollock.

The assassination of Count Pototsky caused international excitement, and is said to have arisen out of the same general conditions in the Slav provinces of Austria which resulted in the recent murder of Crown Prince Ferdinand. Count Pototsky, as a Pole of the aristocratic class, was regarded with enmity by the Ruthenian peasants.

The plot to kill Pototsky was formed by a group of Ruthenian students, who sought to free their compatriots from oppression, and Sichinsky, then 32 years old, was selected as the assassin. As the Governor was receiving a delegation of students in Lemberg, Sichinsky killed him with a revolver.

Life Term for Man of 32.

MAYOR URGES GARY PLAN.

Asks Board of Education to Extend It to More Schools.

Mayor Mitchel wrote to President Churchill of the Board of Education yesterday suggesting that as the Gary plan had worked so well in the New York schools where it had been applied, it should be extended to all the schools it possible.

"I am interested in the Gary plan," wrote the Mayor, "not merely because it assures economies in the use of school buildings and equipment, but because it seems clearly to improve the schools and the education of the children."

Scarsdale Men Not Involved.

In a news article printed in THE TIMES last Sunday concerning the arrest for arson of four members of the Hartsdale (N. Y.) Volunteer Fire Department the name of the Town of Scarsdale, N. Y., was inadvertently used for Hartsdale in the headlines of the first edition. The error was corrected in later editions.

THE UNEXPECTED HAPPENS.

Though it may be premature to say that what the French have called on the western front a war of usury, in which each side takes a daily toll, has suddenly changed its phase, two things are clear. The Anglo-French forces have put themselves upon the offensive for the first time since the affair of Neuve Chapelle in March, and they are for once or at last in a position to make prodigal use of ammunition. The Berlin War Office speaks of "the British and French offensive which had been prepared for months." It began last week in the only way an offensive can begin against strongly intrenched positions, that is, with heavy and continuous gunfire by which the enemy's ground, all marked and plotted in geometrical areas, is first rained upon with explosives and then occupied by troops.

It is undoubtedly more than a coincidence that the Teutonic aggression in Russia began sensibly to abate just prior to this change of Anglo-French tactics in France and Flanders. The Germans had been drawing strength from this front for their ever lengthening line in Russia, while at the same time the Allies, largely by British accretions, were increasing theirs, and also piling up great stores of ammunition.

The assumption that the cost to either side of breaking the western line had become prohibitive was based upon the frightful price the Allies paid for an unimportant advance gained by the battle of Neuve Chapelle. At that time they had no superiority of effective numbers and were inferior in guns and ammunition, except at points of intense concentration. That has changed. The Allies now are superior in numbers, having perhaps five men to three, owing partly to an actual increase in their forces and partly to the gradual transfer of German forces to the eastern line in Russia. Now the Germans apparently are whisking armies out of Russia to meet this new menace on the west, without having been able to gain the one thing most of all desired in Russia, namely, a decision.

That is the converse of what happened a year ago. Russia, moving then very much faster than the Germans thought she could, became so formidable in the east, not only invading East Prussia but threatening also to overwhelm the Austrians and open a way to Berlin, that Germany could not, or dared not, bring to bear on France the additional strength necessary to overcome her. Some strategists now hold that the higher course would have been to force a decision with France at any cost. Suppose the Russians meanwhile took Berlin. Germany, with a beaten France on which to turn her back, would then have had her whole strength to throw against the Slav. However that may be or might have been, the fact is that Germany is still harassed between her foes, and is weaker than she was a year ago. Her enemies are on one side stronger, and now suddenly become offensive, while on the other the foe she risked so much to crush is still unbeaten. Germany is weaker certainly in men, possibly in guns and ammunition and obviously in a strategic sense by having assumed on the eastern front a longer and much more dangerous line. If the Anglo-French forces are really able now to sustain offensive warfare on the west, then Germany's territorial success in Russia may all at once become not an asset but in some degree a liability. The Russians have shown before an unexpected power of recuperation. The Germans must already have weakened their lines in Russia by retransferring men to the western front. That would account for the frequency with which minor Russian successes have begun to be reported. Over a line of 700 miles in Russia the Austro-German forces are in many places vulnerable. It is what the experts call a floating line, unsecured at either end. To assume, as most German critics do, that the Russian power of offense is shattered, is to go on misunderstanding Russian psychology. A Russian army is the only army in the world that retreats without losing heart.

It has been so far a war of unexpectedness. The intrinsically improbable has had a perverse way of bringing itself to pass. Stalemate on a line from the North Sea to Switzerland across Flanders and France, with 4,000,000 men in trenches, was an improbable thing to happen. Once it had, anything else seemed all the while to have been impossible, and military experts began to prove that the war would have to be won elsewhere. Here nothing more could take place, except a contest in attrition. A frontal attack was out of the question. Flanking operations were made impossible, on one end by the North Sea, on the other by a neutral frontier. So it seemed. So the German strategists may have argued. But the Allies now are making frontal attacks all along the line. That after all was not impossible. And if they succeed, the whole aspect of the war may very suddenly change, which was what everybody had given up expecting.

A MEMORABLE SHOCK TO THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.

In the days of his glory the Populist Kansas Senator, WILLIAM ALFRED PEFFER, sat collarless in the seats of the mighty. Representative JERRY SIMPSON of the same glowing State won a renown built on fiction—it is said he wore silk stockings—as "Sockless SIMPSON." Governor GEORGE N. BRIGGS of Massachusetts never wore a cravat. HANNIBAL HAMLIN of Maine never wore an overcoat. In free and easy America these little individualities of costume stir a gentle amusement. But up to a comparatively few years ago a Member of the British Parliament without a tall hat on his head would have been a portent incredible. That ugly cylinder, that tower of respectability, that obelisk of propriety, was the foundation of the British Constitution, the pillar of the State. In days when the twenty-shilling clerk, the thripenny bus young man, would have felt himself false to the British social order if he had not crowned his poll with the black tube, too often accompanied with a sack coat. But in the Commons reigned the silk hat with the frock coat, a noble pair of brothers, one and inseparable.

The wide arch of the ranged empire would fall if the sacred custom were broken. The tall hat of the Parliament man was the palladium of British liberties. A member of the House of Commons on duty without his symbol and aegis would be even more revolutionary and horrendous than—well, say, the Archbishop of Canterbury chewing tobacco.

The dire impossible moment came. The British Constitution tottered. Say, Muse, who of M. P.'s first knocked out the holy tradition.

The obituaries of JAMES KEIR HARDIE, Laborite, affirm that it was he in 1892. When he took his seat as Member for S. W. Ham he was clad in his working clothes, and his curly locks were crowned with one of those deerstalker's caps, dear to the gilly. Thus did Mr. HARDIE proclaim at once his Scotch origin and his defiance of convention and the Constitution.

But the Right Hon. JOHN BURNS, Laborite, was elected for Battersea in 1892. Did he not make his first appearance in the House wearing old clothes and a straw hat? Speak, history! Was it Mr. HARDIE or Mr. BURNS that gave to Constitution its severest shock? Fortunately it survived; and in the last twenty-odd years there has been a considerable emancipation of respectable London folks from the despot stovepipe.

WHEN THE DEADLOCK BREAKS.

An eligible maiden surrounded by a host of ineligible suitors, with her thoughts wandering to some eligible but unresponsive person, might find comfort by taking a look at the Republican Party and reflecting that her case is not unique. The Republican Party is beset by candidates, none of whom it wants. There is nowhere any serious comment on the next campaign which does not wind up with the name either of Justice HUGHES or ex-Senator ROOT, both of whom have emphatically announced that they would not be candidates. There is not the slightest doubt that if the party could really carry out its wishes the nomination for President would go to one of these two men.

As it cannot, it listens with an inattentive ear to the wooing of a string of candidates who in ordinary times would not have the audacity to propose themselves as possible Presidents, ranging from the heavy FAIRBANKS to the impossible WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH, and even further—for the Mayor of Chicago thinks well enough of himself to contest the Illinois delegation with Senator SHERMAN. The outlook is for a deadlock which may last a week, since there is no candidate who can command a majority on any of the early ballots; and deadlocks generally mean the release of delegations from their instructions and the selection of some one not prominent in the first balloting. In that case, where will the delegations swing? Will it be possible for Justice HUGHES to prevent his own nomination? Mr. ROOT will unquestionably be the leading figure of the convention; he will be on the ground and able to check a stampede for himself, but Justice HUGHES will be hundreds of miles away.

Granted a deadlock, a tired convention anxious to break away, a strong undercurrent of sentiment for two men who have not been named or received any votes, and a swarm of unattractive candidates killing each other off, and anything may happen. It is not to be forgotten that Colonel ROOSEVELT, though he cannot very well be present, will be a force in the convention. Most of the Progressives who have gone back to the Republican Party announce that they intend to fight for Progressivism within its ranks. Governor JOHNSON and his trouble-making Californians hardly conceal their purpose to raise as much disturbance as possible, and a threat from them of a bolt would not be lightly regarded. Mr. ROOSEVELT has already included Justice HUGHES in his list of Republicans whom he would support. Let the convention last a week, and begin to cast about in its mind for an escape from the deadlock, and it would take a Hercules or a Samson to stop it. In that case, what would become of the unobjectionable and unattractive candidates who had been dividing the balloting among them—WEEKS, BURTON, FAIRBANKS, SHERMAN, CUMMINS, and the rest?

One thing is certain. There will be a deadlock, and it will last for several days. The number of candidates and their lack of sufficient strength to force an early nomination make that sure. The days of the dark horse are over, if by dark horse is understood a comparatively unknown man; but nothing is likelier than the nomination of a man whose name has not been placed before the convention but is in everybody's mind.

RISING SPIRITS.

Stock markets like yesterday's never come when the country is feeling blue. When there are dealings in a wide variety of securities, and many of them are strong, it is a sign that the business is in the hands of the public and reflects its opinion of the outlook. There is cause for regret that the rising prices of the "war stocks" do not afford a firmer basis for inferences regarding other sorts of trade. Prosperity confined to the trade in war supplies, although it runs into hundreds of millions, and is more substantial than it seemed some months ago, is too restricted and too uncertain in its duration to justify an inference of universal prosperity. For a long time the railways have been laggards in price, so much so that the industrial averages long ago rose above the railways. The Wall Street Journal has computed also that of its representative stocks the railways have contributed a disproportionate share to the Stock Exchange business. That is contrary to the general impression that the industrials, especially the war shares, have made the market. Of the shares on which the averages of both are computed the railways contributed more than twice the number that the industrials did, and the activity in the railways was at the expense of prices. Yesterday another railway went into receivership, and chilled the prospects of a railway boom. Missouri, Kansas & Texas is embarrassed in financing itself, although for 1915 it reports a gain in operating income of 19 per cent., compared with the year ended June 30, 1914. There is a specific reason, as usual.

The prices of both grain and cotton crops are surprisingly good considering the quantities of both. In any other year than this the quantity of breadstuffs would have been thought as calamitous as the curse of too much cotton last year. But in this wonderful year there will be none too much of either. The danger rather is that they will bring into the country so much gold that there may be need of another prayer to be delivered from too much prosperity. It is hard to keep down Wall Street on the fear of too much prosperity, and when Wall Street is rising the country is more cheerful to live in than it has been in recent years. Instead of the cry of the bears, "Cheer up, the worst is yet to come," there is a prospect that there will be substituted the cry of the bulls, "Buy anything, for the best is yet far ahead." The man of even thought and temper will take counsel of neither. There is danger in all extreme views, and it would be extreme to hold that the nearly unblemished domestic outlook is not obscured in some degree by the misfortunes of its largest customers, afflicted and impoverished by the scourge of war.

THE FACTIONS MUST UNITE.

No further doubt exists as to the participation of CARRANZA's troops in the border raids, as the United States Government has ordered the seizure of a supply of arms and ammunition intended for the garrison at Matamoros. Carranzistas may not have started the raids, but they have given practical encouragement to the raiders. Only a few Texans whose experience has led them to distrust all Mexicans believe that CARRANZA has sanctioned the assaults upon Americans by his troops or that he would not stop them if he could. He desires recognition as de facto ruler of Mexico. But his claims were never less warranted than at present, when his inability to preserve order in the north is proved day after day, and the Government he looks to for recognition is compelled to shut off his supply of munitions for the protection of its own people.

There is scarcely a chance now for CARRANZA to prove by Oct. 9 that he is the head of a Government which is competent to preserve order in Mexico and protect the lives of foreigners. He may have the will to do both, but he lacks the power. He represents the strongest force in Mexico, of course, but it is not strong enough to control the country. A union of the better elements among the Carranzistas and the Villistas, with the co-operation of ZAPATA, could accomplish that object. Unless that union can be effected through the good offices of the Pan-American conference, conditions in Mexico will be unchanged for a long while. The fitful war will continue, with an increase of lawlessness in the less settled parts of the country. There is good reason to believe that both CARRANZA's adherents and VILLA's thoroughly comprehend the situation and that they may yet contrive to bring about a union of the factions.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN THE JERSEYS.

The Public Ledger of Philadelphia has been trying to find out what are the prospects of the woman suffrage amendment which New Jersey is to vote on, Oct. 19. Somehow the rosy visions of the suffrage leaders recall the bulletins of the late Senator JAMES K. JONES of Arkansas when he was Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, or the "red-headed and hopeful" attitude of TOM COOPER of Pennsylvania. Mrs. FEICHERT, President of the State Woman Suffrage Association, says decisively:

> The Church, labor, and home interests will support us, and as decent men are in large majority, this should mean victory.

Why "should"? Must. Indeed, "reports show eight men willing to "vote for it to one who will vote "against it." Is decency to win by a beggarly 8 to 1? In very shame New Jersey must make it unanimous. Too many of the party county Chairmen seem to live in indecent counties. "Atlantic County will oppose suf-"frage, according to the general sen-"timent," writes the Republican Chairman; the Democratic doesn't think "much interest is being shown." Bergen County will beat the amendment "by a very large majority." Politicians "against it." What was to be expected of the wicked? "Lack of interest" in Burlington County, according to the Republican Chairman. "Would succeed if voted upon today," is the sly way in which the Democratic Chairman keeps out of trouble. "No opposition" to it in Cape May County, writes the Democratic Chairman. A Cape May editor clings beatifically to the favorable result of a straw vote taken by ladies attached to the Cause. "Will receive "many thousand votes in Hudson "County"—naturally; but not a majority, according to Representative HAVILL. No show in Essex. Going to be beaten in Salem, Ocean, Morris, Middlesex, Hunterdon, Cumberland, Somerset, Sussex, Union, Warren. The Mercer Republican Chairman rather contemptuously writes that "our or-"ganization has given the question "little attention as yet"; the Democratic Chairman, frankly contemptuous, has "not taken an interest in the matter."

Noon meetings, night meetings, factory meetings, hall meetings; missionaries rushing about in their cars of emancipation, sweet, pleading voices, beautiful buttonholers, Portias by the hundred, wit, eloquence and poesy, ardent convictions, reason, appeal, indignation, arguments by the bushel, a dream of fair women in winning raiment—a torpid, inert, grinning, lifeless electorate of men folks! One wretch even blasphemes to the extent of declaring that the women folks of his county take little interest in this flaming, incandescent, quintessential question of all the ages! Eight to one!

Some of the sisters are looking for a miracle. They await a god from the machine. When Mr. WILSON "comes out for" woman suffrage, as he is expected to do in a few days, that will settle the result. The indifferent will be roused. The scorners will be converted. Very flattering to Mr. WILSON, whose great and just influence no reasonable person will deny. But the voters of New Jersey scarcely take their opinions on State matters from Washington. Will the suffragists give up the Cause if Mr. WILSON should be against them?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Would Go Home if Sincere.

Professor MUENSTERBERG's charming picture of the German-American as a man who brought over here an improved method of running things in general, and devoted himself to teaching us his home-grown virtues, faded almost out of sight under the acid test of criticism applied to it Sunday in the Magazine Section of THE TIMES by Professor ALBERT BUSHNELL HART. To accomplish his work of destruction, Professor HART only had to recall the unquestionable fact that Germans are like the rest of the world in that they never emigrate because they are happy and prosperous at home, but because for one or many reasons they are discontented there, and expect or hope to better themselves elsewhere.

It is the wildest of absurdities to contend that the Germans who came to the United States did it with any purpose or desire to re-establish the conditions from which they fled—yes, and not infrequently fled, as did CARL SCHURZ and and not a few others who rank among the best of them, to escape the extremely dangerous consequences of having tried to de-Germanize the German Government. That they and the rest didn't find our way of conducting our affairs intolerable—that they found it, while imperfect, on the whole preferable to what they had known at home—is demonstrated beyond a peradventure by their remaining here instead of going back.

Of course they talked and sang a lot, and honestly, they supposed, about the "Fatherland" they had deserted, but the talking and the singing have always been open to the same suspicion as is the same sort of noise to be heard every Winter at the annual dinners given here in New York by members of up-State and other-State societies. To hear the orators at these feasts one might think them disconsolate exiles from earthly paradises, not living here, but just staying under some terrible compulsion and impatiently awaiting the moment of their happy release from metropolitan horrors. One might think it, that is, if one happened not to know that at least 999 out of 1,000 of those who indulge in these laudations of their native towns or counties or States departed from them with joy in their hearts to try the hazard of new fortunes, and that it would take something at least as strong as an ox chain to drag back any of the 999 to the piously hymned, but utterly unregretted, scenes of their youth.

Prevention the Cure for Fires.

Commissioner ADAMSON deserves and of course will get a lot of commendation for his effort to make New Yorkers realize that most of the terribly numerous and expensive fires from which the city suffers are of the easily avoidable sort and that a considerable majority of them are the direct result of sheer, stupid carelessness. There is not a word to be said against, and many words to be said for, the elaborate preparations he is making to fix public attention on this important subject, and the parades and exercises planned by him for Oct. 9 ought to render "Fire Prevention Day" a notable one on the local calendar.

In time we may come to see that the Fire Department of which we are so proud is really in a way disgraceful to us. It is so because it impugns our intelligence. We maintain a small army of highly trained and highly efficient fire-fighters, and are generous with praise of their courageous devotion to the duties imposed on them, but much of the work and many of the dangers imposed on these men might be abolished if we only would, and then their abilities could be turned to the producing of wealth instead of the mere saving of it from destruction.

Some day we may become wise enough to realize that for all preventable fires somebody is directly responsible, and that this responsibility is especially heavy when the fires spread beyond the property in which they originate. As any fire may do that, even those that are confined to the building in which they start should not be regarded as innocent, and the whole theory that fires are misfortunes should be abandoned. Some of them are, probably, but not many, in the strict sense of the word, and all the rest are better described by other and harsher names.

There is, indeed, a point at which precautionary measures become prohibitively expensive, and the systematic putting out of fires will always number among the necessary tasks of every municipality. To prevent fires, however, is in every way better than to extinguish them after they have begun. The highest service that firemen can render is to diminish the extent of the demand for their services.

Complaints about the size of newspapers, as making them inconvenient to read in the crowded trains in which so many New Yorkers are obliged to do a large part of their newspaper reading, have, of course, something of basis in truth. The makers of the papers know as well as do their readers that smaller pages could be turned more easily than those of what has come to be the customary size, but that size has been selected for reasons many and good, and while not all of them can be readily explained to people unfamiliar with the mechanical side of journalism, it would be wise as well as kind if the uninitiate were to take it for more than probable that in a business as dependent on public favor as is that of issuing newspapers whatever can be done is done to render the reading of them a pleasure.

They might also reflect on the fact that when they buy newspapers they get for their pennies more by far than can be obtained for those coins in any other bargain known to man. To print newspapers in pamphlet form, or even in the form of the larger magazines, would multiply their cost many times, and it is not anywhere recorded that the public wants to pay 15 cents, or even 10, for what it has been getting for 1.

The Girl Ushers' Question.

Last night I went alone into a movie show in your town, and as I approached one of the aisles of the theatre I was greeted by two young goddesses, one blonde, the other brunette, who asked me briskly: "Single?"

THE BATTLE HARVEST MOON.

O golden Harvest Moon that now
Slowly ascends the eastern skies,
Glimpsed through the elm tree's leafy bough
In silent majesty you rise!
On spires and roofs of the far-spreading town
Serene in mellow splendor you look down.

Low now the sound of busy streets
In thy white silence dies away,
Or from the charmed distance greets
The ear like echoes of the day,
As slow in stately pomp, outdating man,
You cities gild and desert caravan.

Along dim streets and avenues
Thy rising tide of radiance flows,
And in thy softened light they lose
The garishness that daytime shows;
Not all the city's wealth or pride or gold
Can with thy magic vie and pomp of old.

For, veiling stars with silvery light
Thou mak'st the skies one Milky Way;
Thy silent progress through the night
Naught can arrest but dawn of day;
Dim continents and oceans dark you drown
In floods of light as now the sleeping town.

Man's pomp of pride or place or power
But transient in the moonlight seems,
For thou hast looked, as in this hour,
On cities that are now but dreams;
On Thebes and Nineveh, Palmyra, Tyre,
You looked, and saw their glories proud expire.

And you, O Harvest Moon, look down
On Europe's widespread battlefield,
Where ere the forest leaves turn brown
A greater harvest it will yield,
And thousands that tonight now look on you
Perchance for the last time your light will view.

Earth's harvest now is gathered quite,
In all but furthest northern lands,
But thou, O Moon, doth shed thy light
On fields where Death the Reaper stands,
His ripened harvest white before him spread,
Behind him strown the long swaths of the dead.

Dim, dread, and ghastly is the sight,
O golden Harvest Moon, you see—
Stern dead men strown on fields of night
Where helpless wounded gaze on thee,
While in a million homes sad mothers yearn
And weep and pray for sons who'll ne'er return!

CORPORATION PATHOLOGY.

Allopathic Versus Homeopathic Methods in Reorganization.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The announcement in the recent advertisements of reorganization of the Kansas City Railway and Light Company that the plan of reorganization was prepared by United States Circuit Judge William C. Hook is one of marked interest, deserving, as it seems to me, some attention from the press as an indication of a possible important advance in the attitude of American courts toward that which British courts adopt in respect to reorganization.

In England the British Companies act makes provision for the reorganization of insolvent corporations; it makes a plan binding on all when three-fourths of the respective classes of creditors and security holders favor the plan and when the court finds the plan to be fair and equitable. Thus, in Great Britain expensive foreclosures such as are here necessary when mortgage bonds were issued may be avoided, and the whole scheme of corporate reorganization is brought before the court for its final sanction. Also, in England new capital furnished for reorganization can be made to have priority of lien over all old securities.

In this country no such law exists, excepting to a very limited extent through what is known as composition in bankruptcy. But a composition in bankruptcy deals only with the readjustment or scaling down of creditors' claims, does not provide as to disposition of stockholders' interests nor for priority to new capital, and no effective provision for readjustment of claims of secured creditors is made. In this country, therefore, for all practical purposes no such law as the British statute exists.

Therefore, reorganizations in this country are generally, and, in fact, nearly always, accomplished through purchase from receivers by a reorganization committee of the assets of the insolvent corporation. The committee makes payment for such purchase largely through the deposit of the old securities in place of cash. Security holders assent to the sale only after a plan involving the issuance of new securities, &c., has been approved by them, and the sale is, as a matter of fact, little more than a step in reorganization and a method of getting rid of nonassentors by paying them as little cash as possible for their holdings. The terms of the reorganization itself do not come before the court. Whether the various classes of security holders, with conflicting liens and claims of priority as against one another, receive equitable treatment is not a matter presented to the court, but is one of private arrangement between committees representing the various classes of security holders, whereas in England the whole scheme of readjustment is subject to the Court's approval. Here the plan generally does not come before the court.

It appears that Judge Hook has consented to shoulder the burden of preparing a plan of reorganization adjusting the rights of all classes of security holders. Thus assurance is, in this instance, given that a disinterested court has endeavored to do what is always accomplished in Great Britain; and it is for that reason that this advertisement seems worthy of comment.

It would appear that the powers granted to Congress to enact a bankruptcy law indicate that constitutional legislation (perhaps through enlargement of the bankruptcy law) can be enacted to accomplish those beneficent results which are possible in Great Britain. The language of the United States Supreme Court in the case of Canada Southern v. Gebhard (109 U. S. 527) supports this view.

If such a statute were to be enacted by Congress no such situation could again occur as that which arose in the celebrated case of Northern Pacific v. Boyd, (228 U. S. 482,) where a creditor not provided for in the plan of reorganization was allowed to exercise his rights as against the reorganized property over a decade after the reorganization had been effected by sale under foreclosure.

If such a statute were to be enacted reorganizations would come directly under the supervision of the courts. Minority interests and junior security holders and lienors would be protected against drastic or oppressive foreclosures, and, on the other hand, obstructive measures for purposes of delay, &c., by selfish minority interests would be ineffective, all expenses and fees of reorganization would come before the court, and, finally, security holders would, it is believed, more readily deposit their holdings with reorganization committees, knowing that, in the last analysis, no plan could be adopted until approved by a disinterested court holding an even balance between all the classes of security holders.

I venture, therefore, to write this letter in the hope that it may produce an expression of views looking, possibly, toward constructive legislation from Congress, so as to bring reorganizations in this country, as in England, directly and completely before the courts.

Superfluous Power at Niagara.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Francis Fitzgerald undertakes to contradict my statement with regard to the failure of full utilization of Niagara power, but in so doing he practically concedes the point, which, as I propounded it, is that the full available energy of existing hydroelectric developments at Niagara has not yet found a market.

Mr. Fitzgerald admits that small supplies of energy are still available. As a matter of fact, the Hydroelectric Power Commission of Ontario has a contract to deliver to it 100,000 horse power, of which it has so far been able to dispose of but 50,000. An offer was recently made to deliver 40,000 horse power to a proposed corporation for transmission to Buffalo.

The use of public money and political effort on the Canadian side and the artificial introduction of specialized industries on the American side have been found necessary to provide a means for the utilization of the energy so far available. Interested speculators would doubtless like to see the development of further unutilizable energy, the profit of which would find its way into their pockets, especially if the process could be conducted, as in Ontario, at the expense of the taxpayers of the State of New York.

Who Purified Baseball?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The many obituary notices of the late A. G. Spalding lay emphasis on his part in the purification of baseball after the scandals that broke up the Louisville Club in 1877. While Mr. Spalding may have contributed his share in the work of housecleaning, the chief honor for the whole affair undoubtedly belongs to the late W. A. Hulburt. And it is no reflection on Mr. Spalding to say that the untimely death of Mr. Hulburt was the greatest loss ever suffered by organized baseball.

Who can forget the annual pilgrimages of poor Jim Devlin, with his petition for reinstatement? He always managed to secure the signatures of most of those interested in the game, but Hulburt was adamant, and finally told him that he could never again play baseball. Sympathy and financial help for his family were always at hand and never failed, but his career as a baseball player was closed forever. More than once since his death has organized baseball needed an iron hand like Mr. Hulburt's!

REFLECTIONS OF A PLATTSBURG ROOKIE.

How It Feels to Have Been Annihilated, to Learn Things From a Tactful Regular, and to Discover One's Inefficiency.

By HERBERT K. STOCKTON.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What, if anything, did the Plattsburg business men's camp accomplish toward preparedness? Without presuming to speak for the rest of the regiment, may I give, for such of the unmilitary public as are interested, the impressions of an ordinary citizen who underwent elementary military training there from Aug. 10 to Sept. 6?

In such a review there is no place for memories of personal enjoyment—of the colors of dawn seen through the opening of the shelter tent, of wholesome outdoor labor, of bracing military discipline, of the comradeship that comes with working together. The question is, what were the practical results?

First and foremost, Plattsburg fostered a sense of humility, so that before camp was a day old the "million men in arms" catchword invariably evoked a sad smile from the nearest rookie. The "fit to be an officer" theory, too, looks almost as ludicrous to most of us after a month of busy effort. I think we feel that General Wood fairly states the capacity of the average Plattsburg graduate as comprising, at the most, ability to drill recruits in the elements of military training, in the school of the soldier, of the squad, and perhaps of the company, for the first three or four weeks of mobilization.

As a trivial instance of the thorny path of preparedness, I recall an interminable wrestle with my brand-new Springfield the first day it was in my hands. The most minute and all-embracing description of every namable screw and plate of the gun had been poured into us with sharp efficiency by our Captain, and now, in order to clean the vitals of the thing, I merely desired to remove a bit of metal which I knew to be the magazine floor plate, obviously held firmly in place by the magazine floor plate catch spring. I assumed that its reluctance to spring was the pig-headed stubbornness of a new gun, and it was not till my five tentmates and the powers above had failed me that I thought of getting a regular to show me the knack of jumping it out. Small wonder that we felt no resentment when we knew the regulars called us "the tourists," or that I sympathized instinctively with the Sergeant, who naïvely revealed that his proper authorities had instructed him to treat us with "tact."

Granted that we have a proper humility, there follows the realization that hard work, and more of it, lies ahead of those of us who feel that we must become more nearly qualified to be soldiers. War is as difficult a business as any, and, thanks to Plattsburg, at least 1,300 civilians in this country have realized by the sweat of their brows that to be any good in case of war they must work as hard now to fit themselves to fight as they work to earn their daily bread.

If the esprit, the ardent spirit of service, which arose at Plattsburg is to be kept up, this necessary grind of study and practice will be carried out, as well as such things can be, by a lot of amateurs. Whether the grind will be gone through with, and how, depends, of course, on the leadership now given us.

How that word leadership grew in significance at camp! Before a week had passed I saw a famous football coach, who by this time has carried a small army corps from scrub to 'Varsity, turn from polishing his gun, when some one praised our Captain, to say impetuously: "That man—I'd follow him anywhere!"

If there was one thing in the world the heart of this same Captain was set upon we knew it to be good shooting. One day the crowd of 150 men was called to attention for a moment at noon mess and the brief announcement made that the company had won regimental shooting honors. The yell that greeted von Hindenburg's victories could hardly have been more immediate and amazing than our instinctive response. And it was not the mere excitement of a football crowd. Each of us knew that the Captain and his Lieutenant had coached us, labored with us, and lifted us into shooting supremacy, and that each man had tried his hardest to make good. That is esprit.

Again, in an assault on a strong position in manoeuvres, the company was ordered forward through a young cornfield to lie down and take up the fire at its further edge. Our platoon leader, a Brooklyn Police Lieutenant, (who need not read this to know that he had our enthusiastic following,) carried us through the cornfield and on in a dash for fifty yards beyond to a low wall, for the edge of the cornfield was utterly exposed. We knew we were under a tremendous fire, and soon learned that by the immediate ruling of the nearest umpire we had been annihilated. The doubt and grief of our leader plainly gnawed at his conscience. Had he, or had he not, failed his Captain and lost his platoon through a blunder? Happy to relate, the Captain assured him he had done the only possible thing and his relief was great. But a certain distaste for being annihilated remained with the privates in rank.

For if we had learned to answer leadership with loyalty, we had also learned to realize when good leadership was lacking. We knew that if we encamped in a bog and then were routed out of it in disorder before sundown, some one had blundered; and we wondered, if this happened in peace with 5,000 men, what would happen in war with 50,000 or with 500,000. And we caught the irony of an evening lecture on the ideal sanitation that had been given Vera Cruz when we were apprised that our throng of mules, horses, and men with soap, toothbrushes and scrubbing brushes had precipitated itself only that afternoon into the water supply of the nearest town.

Without his getting puffed up, it became possible even for the rookie to perceive tactical mistakes when companies of regulars failed to foresee their own surprise and destruction or capture.

I recall that at one point in the field exercises the regulars made a frontal attack on our position. We did not need the lecture round the camp fire that night to realize that the attacking troops were slaughtered. It gives one an ineffaceable impression of what not to do, when, kneeling leisurely behind cover and firing blanks, one watches the sloping fields of the countryside swarming with little khaki figures coming forward in squad columns and platoon rushes, piling in masses through barb wire fences, and, worst of all, changing front during the attack to meet outflanking reserves, all under the rattle of machine guns and against the fire of 400 rifles. If the regulars themselves offered that target—and it may be remarked that a khaki uniform shows up badly on the Summer landscape—we guessed what would happen in action to the Provisional Regiment of rookies.

As the result of many impressions like these, accumulated during four weeks, there is at least one Plattsburg rookie who wants to see: (1,) a good big regular army, as big as the General Staff wants, fitted out with everything of the best and trained to the minute; (2,) more military training, as stiff as possible, for himself and for those like him; (3,) more training for the National Guard, however good they may be already. In short, with a burning sense of its physical helplessness, he wants to see his country have, as soon as possible, all the essentials of a twentieth century military machine as efficient for our needs as the Germans' is for theirs.

PICTURE WORDS OF FICTION.

Written and Rewritten, Turned and Returned, They Produce Despair.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The modern writer of fiction, in his efforts to introduce action into his dialogue and put some life into his characters, too frequently overworks his verbs and adverbs, so that he soon exhausts his scanty supply of such parts of speech and wears out his readers' patience. The result of such conscious striving is to make both action and characters have all the mechanical movements of a puppet show. As an illustration I quote from a serial story in one of our monthly magazines. I give merely the links in the dialogue:

"He asked smiling—he asked gently—I told him desperately—'Well' I challenged—I said mischievously—I asked slyly—I said weakly—I said stubbornly—I demanded eagerly—I protested—he demanded roughly—he sat up stiffly—I shriveled up not only at his words but at his looks—Almost hysterically I cried out—'Why, Nora', he said aggrievedly—I smiled ruefully—I turned around and shouted at him almost hysterically—I cried excitedly—She said spitefully—I responded blandly—I replied, smiling gloriously—'I've got only 10 cents in the world', I blurted out—'You can't', retorted Loly, her nostrils dilating—I nodded, smiling—Then she shrugged her shoulders and laughed sneeringly—I asked heavily—I asked wistfully—I assented languidly—She said pityingly—I said lightly—'I came', he returned, 'as soon as you did what I told you'—He said, with an expressive motion—'Hm!' snorted mama, 'that all sounds very fine'—I said mischievously—I sat up at that and said triumphantly—he said slowly—he asked me suddenly—'I thought you wouldn't be interested', I quibbled—I insisted—I said sadly—I said slyly—He sneered—I nodded—He said roughly—ad infinitum.

Assorted Plagiarisms.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

George S. Hillman seems anxious that the authorship of "The Van Am Song" should be made known to the public, but had he been aware that the song is largely a plagiarism he might not have had such anxiety. He says that it "is unique in the history of college verse." I do not know as to that, but I do know that the old hunting song of England, "Do Ye Ken John Peel?" still remembered there, for "his bam and his hunting in the morning," is the original song of which the "Van Am Song" is but an echo.

It seems strange to me that our American "seats of learning" have not given us something of their own in the way of college songs. For instance, there was no reason, except that of good taste, why Harvard should have taken Tom Moore's "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms" and utilized it in "Fair Harvard," or why West Point should have taken captive "Irish Molly O" and made her do duty for "Benny Havens O." It was stated in one of yesterday's papers, as a curious thing, that a Baptist clergyman had put words to "Tipperary" and made a hymn, but that is nothing new, for the Rev. Charles Wesley, when he and his brother John were founding the Methodist Church, went to Ireland, appropriated many of the sweet old melodies of that "land of songs," and having wedded them to suitable verses printed and published them at Dublin as the "First Methodist Hymn Book."

Son of Late Packer and Miss E. F. Loewenstein Wed by Alderman.

Marion B. Sulzberger, son of the late Ferdinand Sulzberger, and Miss Edna Frieda Loewenstein, daughter of Mrs. Charles Loewenstein of 411 West End Avenue, were married yesterday afternoon by Alderman James A. Milligan in the marriage chapel of the Municipal Building.

Acting as witnesses for the couple were Mrs. Sulzberger, mother of the bridegroom, who was dressed in mourning, and Miss Eleanie H. Freeman. When Alderman Milligan asked Mr. Sulzberger for his wedding ring, his mother offered her own to be used for the ceremony.

Mr. Sulberger is 20 years old and his bride is one year his senior. Her parents were born in Germany.

The bridegroom's father died on Aug. 6 in a sanitarium at Constance, Germany. He had been living abroad for two years. He was known here as "The Father of the Packing Industry," and was a descendant of the Sulzberger family which came from the town of Sulzberger in Havaria. He founded the packing house of Sulzberger & Sons Company of America.

DR. K. F. JUNOR DIES; CANCER SPECIALIST

Believed He Had Discovered a Cure for the Disease by Use of Chemicals.

ONCE PROMINENT PASTOR

Head of Collegiate Church in West Thirty-fourth St. for 12 Years—Active in Brooklyn Civic Life.

Dr. Kenneth F. Junor, a prominent physician, clergyman, and lecturer of Brooklyn, whose home was at 458 East Twenty-ninth Street, Flatbush, died on Sunday night in Toronto, Canada. Dr. Junor was born in London, Ontario, on Aug. 31, 1846, and was educated for the ministry at the Union Theological Seminary in this city. He was ordained a clergyman of the Canadian Presbyterian Church at Halifax in 1873, and then went to Bermuda, where he established a church at Hamilton. From there he went to the Island of Formosa, where he did missionary work for three years.

For several years Dr. Junor had been a student of medicine, and on his return to this country from China he determined to become a physician. He entered the University of New York and in 1880 he received the degree of M. D. In the same year he became pastor of De Witt Chapel, in Twenty-ninth Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, which was owned by the Collegiate Church Corporation. When he started this church it was with only twenty members, and three years later, when the chapel was sold and he was transferred to the Collegiate Church, in West Thirty-fourth Street, Dr. Junor took 800 persons with him. He began to practice medicine in the neighborhood of his church, but treated only those who could not afford to pay for a physician. Dr. Junor was pastor of the Collegiate Church for twelve years.

Dr. Junor also became prominent in the civic work of Brooklyn. He waged a long warfare for the extermination of mosquitos in Flatbush, and for a time he held the position of Inspector for the Board of Health, without pay, to demonstrate that mosquitos could be exterminated. In recent years Dr. Junor had devoted his time to the study of cancer, and a few years ago asserted that he had discovered a cure for the disease by the use of chemicals.

He was a member of the Academy of Sciences of New York, a Fellow of the Society of Science of London, and correspondent of the Canadian Institute.

LIVELY BILL AT THE PALACE.

Fritzi Scheff, Fogarty, Herz, and Others Entertain There.

Frank Fogarty, Alexander Carr, Fritzi Scheff, Frederick Bowers, and Ralph Herz divide the honors pretty evenly in this week's lively program at the Palace Theatre.

Miss Scheff vocalizes in her peculiar, spirited, xylophonic manner, winding up, of course, with her perennial "Kiss Me Again." Fogarty and Ralph Herz disport themselves before the curtain, each in his fashion. Mr. Carr remains over from the week before with his Warfieldian playlet, "An April Shower," and Mr. Bowers sings songs about Norwood and Adele and war with a company almost as large and as heavily laden with scenery as if he were a wordless play staged by some one who used to know Reinhardt.

BERLIN, Sept. 27, (by Wireless Telegraphy to Tuckerton, N. J.)—The first production of Professor Max Schillings's new opera, "Mona Lisa," has been given in the Royal Theatre at Stuttgart.

Dr. Richard Strauss and Professor Engelbert Humperdinck were in the audience.

The Swedish singer John Forsell, in the rôle of the jealous husband, was especially applauded.

The Misses Gwendolyn E. Austin and Edna Dillingham attended the bride, and Philip D. Kingsley of Chicago was best man. J. Roland Hogue, Arthur S. Ball, and Lieutenant Wallace McNab acted as ushers.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Several speeches were made in favor of the plan.

MAY IRWIN'S PLAY ANEW.

Improved Production Launches Suffrage Week at the Park.

After a severe case of heat prostration and a giddy trip to Washington for a performance before the National Press Club, "33 Washington Square" reappeared refreshed and invigorated last evening at the Park Theatre. May Irwin, always one of the most hugely amusing of all living human beings, is as hearty and expert a comedienne as she was when the play opened some weeks ago. The play itself has been radically improved. There can be no precise measurement of this improvement, but it is a duty and a pleasure to report that, roughly speaking, the piece now on view in Columbus Circle is about five times as entertaining as it was at the premiere.

Several advantageous twists have been given to the story, the cast has been radically altered for the better, and Miss Irwin, ever incorrigibly impromptu, has added countless characteristic touches, palpably of her own invention, to the lines assigned her. As a result, last night's audience was in a pleasant state of mild hysteria all evening. And then she sings. She has inserted four songs which she warbles with infinite gusto. They went well last night, and will go still better when the orchestra is hushed and Miss Irwin is suffered to sing without opposition.

"33 Washington Square" has been opened as suffrage headquarters, and all this week speakers for the cause will be heard between the acts, while a percentage of the receipts will go to the funds of the Empire State Campaign Committee. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw was last evening's speaker.

McGinnis, the rector, announced yesterday. The cornerstone of the new building is to be laid next Sunday.

Mrs. Straight, who is not a Catholic, made a generous contribution to the church several years ago, when Dr. McGinnis started building the parish hall and clubhouse. Mrs. Straight was Miss Dorothy Whitney, daughter of William C. Whitney.

THE WEEK IN THE THEATRES.

The stars that shine in the playhouses that surround Times Square and the current plays are: "The Girl Who Smiles," in the Longacre Theatre; May Irwin, in "33 Washington Square," at the Park; "Moloch," with Holbrook Blinn, at the New Amsterdam; "Husband and Wife," in the Forty-eighth Street Theatre; "Our Children," in the Maxine Elliott's; "New Waterbury's Town Topics," at the Century; "Hit-the-Trail-Holliday," with Fred Niblo, in the Astor Theatre; "Grumpy," with Cyril Maude in his famous characterization, at the Empire; "The Duke of Killicrankie," and "Rosalind," with Marie Tempest in the principal roles of both, at the Lyceum; "The House of Glass," a new melodrama, in the Lyric; "Kismet," in the Belasco; "Under Fire," a war melodrama, at the Hudson; "Some Baby," at the Fulton; "Chin-Chin," the only play held over from last year, at the Globe; "Rolling Stones," in the Harris Theatre; "Common Clay," with John Mason and Jane Cowl, in the Republic; "Cousin Lucy," with Julian Eltinge and Lucy, at the Knickerbocker; "Young America," in the Gaiety Theatre. The spectacular film, "The Birth of a Nation," is still being shown at the Liberty. In the Vitagraph Theatre a new feature film for its theme is being shown.

Wilton Lackaye presented Gordone Johnstone and Warwick Williams's dramatic playlet, "The Bomb," in the Colonial Theatre yesterday. Constance and Irene Fanger, popular songs, and Ryan and Tierney contributed to the melody of the program with their own compositions. Harry Tate and company gave the familiar pantomimic sketch, "Motoring."

Eva Tanguay made her first appearance of the new season in the Alhambra yesterday. She brought with her some new songs and gowns, both designed along Tanguay lines of unusualness. Ray Harris, who is also in the Winter Garden, presented a sketch, "The Magazine Man and the Lady," assisted by Beekie Crawford. Eddie Leonard and Austin Mack and company gave the musical number, "The Minstrel's Return."

The Hauerbach-Frimi operetta, "High Jinks," of several seasons ago, is the week's offering in the Standard Theatre. Kathryn Miley is the prima donna in the role originally filled by the indefatigable Emma Trentini.

Louis Mann began a week's engagement yesterday in "The Bubble," his latest starring vehicle written for him by Edward Locke. His company includes Laura Walker, Augusta Burmester, and George Wellington.

In the Lexington yesterday Edward Sheldon's dramatization of Sudermann's unusual novel, "The Song of Songs," was acted. The principal roles are still taken by the players who created them when the play was acted for a week last year at the Eltinge. Irene Fenwick, Thomas A. Wise, and Cyril Keightley among the number.

"Under Cover," Roi Cooper Megrue's melodrama presented last season at the Cort, is the new offering at the Bronx Opera House. Florence Malone and Rockliffe Fellowes head the cast.

"Love, Law, and Politics" and "A Call for Volunteers" are the titles of the new burlesques presented by Billy K. Wells and the Rosaland Girls company yesterday in the Columbia.

At the Yorkville "Hello Paris" is the title of the new burlesque offering. It consists of two travesties and an olio of vaudeville.

Billy Watson and his company gave a new burlesque entitled "The United Beauties" in the Olympic yesterday.

Donald Brian, the popular musical comedy star, is to be seen in the films for the first time at the Strand Theatre this week. A picturization of Harold McGrath's novel, "The Voice in the Fog," introduced Mr. Brian as a screen actor. During the course of the picture Mr. Brian has a chance to show his skill and grace as a dancer.

Another of the pictures Elsie Janis wrote, directed, and acted is the feature at the Broadway this week. It is from the Bosworth studios.

"The Wonderful Adventure" is the title of the feature film at the Academy of Music. William Farnum is its star, and for it he actual dual roles quite different in character. By a new process of manufacture both characters acted by Mr. Farnum appear simultaneously on the screen.

Brooklyn Amusements..

The new bill of Keith vaudeville presented yesterday in the Orpheum had as its features Sam Chip and Mary Marble in "The Clock Shop," William Courtleigh in George V. Hobart's play, "Benches"; the Watson Sisters, and Lyons and Yosco.

Paul Armstrong's best playlet, "Woman Proposes," was acted in the Bushwick Theatre. Kate Elinore and Sam Williams offered their skit, "The Hunter and the Hunter-ess," and the Seven Honey Boy Minstrels gave a condensed minstrel show.

Sylvester Schaeffer, the German performer who does a great variety of things, from feats of strength to painting landscapes heads the new bill at the Prospect. Valerie Bergere in a new war playlet, "War Babies," and George McKay and Ottie Ardine in a specialty are other numbers.

Swift & Company's sales of beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, Sept. 25, averaged as follows: Domestic beef, 11.08 cents per pound.—Advt.

55 FOUNDLINGS SENT WEST.

Girls in Demand by Those Who Will Give Them Homes.

Fifty-five foundlings, ranging in age from one to four years, left the Grand Central Terminal yesterday morning in a private car for new found homes in the West. It was the latest exodus from the New York Foundling Hospital, on Sixty-eighth Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues, whose agents have found homes for nearly 20,000 children in the last forty-six years.

There were forty-four girls and eleven boys, for it was explained by the sisters at the home, girl babies are in greater demand. The children were in charge of four nurses and two Sisters. Beds for them all and food enough for one day were taken on the car.

The babies are going to homes in Minnesota and the Dakotas. There they will grow up without knowing that they are not the own children of their foster-parents. After three years they may be legally adopted.

FULLERTON COMPARES WORLD'S SERIES FIRST BASEMEN—GOLFERS PLAY AT GREENWICH

AUTO DRIVER GRANT SEVERELY BURNED

Pinned In by Wheel as Blazing Racing Car Dashes Down Speedway Curve.

RESCUED BY WORKMEN

Both Legs Badly Scorched When Car Catches Fire in Trial Heat for the Astor Cup Race.

Harry Grant, one of the racing automobile drivers, while practicing for the Astor Cup race on Saturday at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway yesterday afternoon, was badly burned when the Maxwell car which he was driving caught fire. Grant, pined in behind the steering wheel, was soon enveloped in flames, and both legs were severely burned to the hips before workmen at the side of the track pulled him out of the car.

Grant was removed to the Coney Island Hospital. He will be unable to drive in Saturday's race, and the Maxwell racer, while the hood and other metal parts were melted, may be repaired in time for the contest.

Just before the car caught fire, Grant was racing around the course with one of the Stutz cars, driven by Tom Rooney. After a few turns of the track at a clip of 100 miles an hour, teh Stutz car went far into the lead and Grant dropped back. As he was mounting the high bank at the Sheepshead Bay end, fire started to shoot from the back of the machine. Red Stafford, the mechanician, looked behind and saw the trouble, but by this time the racer was shooting up the incline, and it was impossible to stop.

Stafford applied the emergency brakes and Grant steered the car down the embankment just in time to prevent its overturning. Stafford jumped from the burning car, but Grant was unable to get out. The car was on fire in a few seconds, the flames leaping several feet in the air. The floor of the car was burning through and Grant was unable to extricate his legs from the blaze. As the car plunged down to the foot of the embankment a dozen workmen went to his aid and after getting Grant out of the burning car they put the fire out with sand. Eddie Hickenbacker, Grant's teammate, and Earl Cooper raced to his aid and he was carried to the hospital in Cooper's Stutz racer.

Grant was the winner of the Vanderbilt Cup race in 1909 and 1910, driving an Alco.

Engineer Bell of the Maxwell camp jumped on the rear of Rickenbacker's car when it went to Grant's aid. He was thrown off and sustained a fractured ankle. He was also taken to the Coney Island Hospital.

Seven cars qualified yesterday for the Astor Cup race, the fastest time being made by Resta, who drove a Peugeot two miles in 1:08.20, a rate of 106 miles an hour. The next best time was made by Jack Aitken, who drove a Peugeot two miles in 1:08.65, at a rate of 105 miles an hour. Oldfield, in a Delage, averaged 104 miles an hour, and Rickenbacker, in a Maxwell, qualified with in average speed of 100 miles an hour. Two of the Duesenberg racers qualified yesterday. Eddie O'Donnell, an average speed of 92 miles an hour, and Willie Haupt at 90 miles an hour.

Ralph De Palma was out yesterday for the first time, and drove around the track half a dozen times in his Mercedes at a rate of over 100 miles an hour. He did not attempt to qualify, as he was only getting familiar with the turns of the track. De Palma was forced to stop when his car caught fire, but it was quickly extinguished by the mechanician. De Palma is looked upon as Resta's most formidable rival in Saturday's race.

Finley R. Porter, the manufacturer of the F. R. P. cars, was at the track yesterday with Jean Porporato, the Italian driver. The F. R. P. cars will be ready for a tryout this afternoon. The garages of the various cars resemble small automobile factories, and each day the racing cars are taken apart. The drivers also practice quick tire changing, and yesterday De Palma changed one of his tires in half a minute.

One of the chief topics about the racing camps yesterday was the great performance of Earl Cooper in a Stutz on Sunday. Cooper drove 100 miles in less than an hour, at an average of 101 miles an hour. This is the best open performance any of the cars have shown thus far. The cars which qualified yesterday were:

Car and Driver.	Time, Two Miles.	Miles Per Hour.

Peugeot, Aitken	1:08:65	105

President Comiskey of the White Sox and President Thomas of the National Leaguers arranged the details today, and, as was forecast, ignored the request of the Federal League to make the series three-cornered. The schedule provides for seven games.

BROOKFEDS SHUT OUT.

Pitcher Wilson Wild and Ineffective and Chicago Wins, 5 to 0.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Chicago held their position in the last lap of the pennant race by defeating Brooklyn 5 to 0 here today. Bill Bailey pitched the shutout and allowed only three scattered singles. No Brooklyn runner reached third base. F. Wilson is charged with the visitors' defeat, four runs having been made off him from two passes and four hits in the first inning. The score:

Huey Victor at Billiards.

William F. Huey, the Chicago pocket billiard player who tonight starts a three-block series with George Moore for the world's championship, yesterday played two exhibition matches at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Academy, and in each showed excellent form and a very good stroke. In the afternoon the Chicagoan, who was runner up to Moore in the last championship tournament, easily defeated Henry Frantzen, 50 to 24, making the high run of 6 against his opponent's best effort of 4. The match lasted fifty-six innings. Huey averaged a point an inning in the evening contest, in which he triumphed over Alex Moore by a 40 to 18 count. In this match Huey's best break netted him 5 points, and Moore gathered 3 in one inning. Huey's match with the title holder will be played in blocks of fifty, continuing tomorrow and Thursday nights at Doyle's Academy.

The final of the September English billiard tournament was also decided at Doyle's last night, Bert Kortland defeating J. C. Clifford by a score of 300 to 200. Kortland's high break gave him 39 points and Clifford's 16.

Japanese Wins Two Cue Matches.

Koji Yamada, the Japanese balkline billiard player, was a double victor in exhibition matches at Maurice Daly's Broadway Academy yesterday. In the afternoon he defeated H Brown, 500 to 126, making high runs of 129 and 88 and averaging 24 8-21. Brown's high run was 16 and his average 6. George Spears gave a better exhibition against the Japanese in the evening match but was defeated, 250 points to 123. The little Oriental cueist made a big run of 80 and averaged 8 8-15.

Interstate Three-Cushion Billiards.

The second game in New York of the Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League will be played at Thum's Billiard Academy in Fortieth Street tonight. George Slosson, who represents New York City, will play Horace Lean of Detroit.

Sunday Traps at Travers Island.

So popular has trapshooting become among members of the New York Athletic Club that the Shooting Committee has decided to hold Sunday competitions this season at Travers Island, in addition to the events on Saturdays and holidays. George J. Corbett, who successfully managed the Travers Island bluerock competition last Winter, again is Captain of the Winged Foot team. He announced yesterday that the regular season will open on Saturday, Oct. 30, and will close with the club championship on Saturday, May 13. On the opening day there will be a special 100-"bird" event for scratch and handicap trophies. The regular program will start on Election Day. The amateur championship will be held next May. The preliminary to the shoot will be decided on Friday, May 5, and the title meeting will take place on the next day. The event will be at 200 targets. It is planned to hold a 100-bird event on each Sunday. In addition, other events will be arranged if deemed necessary.

FIRST BASEMEN IN THE WORLD'S SERIES

Neither Hoblitzel Nor Luderus Will "Star" Unless Pitchers Become Careless.

In his first "dope" article upon the world's series of 1915 Fullerton explained his system of picking a winning team. "The basis of all 'dope' is comparison," he said. A perfect player would have 1,000 points. Cobb is rated at 922, Speaker at 908, and "dope" on inferior players comes from comparison with such near-perfect players, with deductions for differences in speed, hitting power, quick thinking, throwing, and base running. Then it is necessary to estimate the value of a player as a batter by studying his ability or inability to hit certain pitchers. After that the "dopester" figures how much the work of the catcher will affect the attack of the opposing team. When the value of a player as an individual is computed, his value as a part of a baseball machine must be reckoned. Then there is the relative value of position to be considered. Thus, in defensive play, a centre fielder is worth only 4.5 in 100, whereas a pitcher is worth 35 in 100. After studying conditions of fields, and guessing which pitchers the managers will use, the "dopester" computes the approximate score of each game.

First Basemen Compared.

By HUGH FULLERTON.

	Value in Offense.	Value in Defense.	Value in Season.	Value in Series.
Hoblitzel	.852	871	704	737
Luderus	.861	618	717	710

There are few ball players in the country about whose ability there is as much question as there is about that of Dick Hoblitzel. From first baseman of the National League he retrograded until he was not considered good enough for the tail end Cincinnati club and every club in the National League, five of which needed first basemen, waived claim and he went to Boston. There he struck his old stride, and seemed as good a ball player as ever, although he has played by streaks—the greatest in the league for a time, and far off his work at another. That he has lost some of his sensational speed around first is undoubted, and his base running is not what he promised.

Hobby is a left-handed first sacker, handles the ball like a flash along the line, and makes the play down to second or across to third as handily as any one. That he is strong enough to hold the steady job with Del Gainor on the bench shows that Carrigan thinks he is going well and relieves us of the necessity of figuring Gainor in this series save as a pinch hitter or a capable understudy if Hoblitzel should be incapacitated in any way.

Luderus is more like the old type of first baseman than any other man now in the game. He is a big, heavy, flat-footed tall player, slow and a bit awkward in his movements and only a fair first baseman. His chief defensive strength lies in the fact that he is solid and steady and that he makes an excellent mark for the other infielders to throw at. He is a plodding, earnest worker, cool under all circumstances and just about as good a player, mechanically, in a world's series as he would be in an exhibition game. Luderus has been a normal .285 hitter ever since he broke in to the National League in spite of his slowness at the bat, a terrific drive and the fact that he plays on the Philadelphia grounds adds perhaps 15 points to his percentage because he hits hard toward right field. The majority of his long hits are over or against the right field stone wall. Batting against Hooper and Speaker will cut down his chance on the long Boston field, but the short wall at Philadelphia will help him and handicap them.

This season Luderus is rapping the onion to the tune of about .340 and keeping right on. He is helped by the fact that the pitching in the National League has been worse this season than it has been in a long time. To see how he is likely to bat against Wood, Shore, Leonard, Ruth, and Foster, I looked over his batting against ten National League pitchers who are similar to them in style. Against these ten (which included Toney of Cincinnati, Ragan, and Neff of Boston, Pfeffer and Yeargin) I discovered that his average against these ten was .288—a rather remarkable difference. The indication is that Luderus is not likely to be so formidable in the world's series as one might think from the bare averages.

Neither Hobby nor Luderus has been hitting the left-handers very well. Studying Hobby's figures against five American League pitchers, including Johnson, Scott, and Caldwell, I find his batting average must also be reduced considerably when he faces Alexander, Chalmers and Rixey, who will beyond doubt carry the burden for Moran.

Neither man is a good base runner. Hobby having some advantage in that he is a fair man to start a three-block base, going faster from second to third than from first to second.

Indeed, in studying these figures, it will strike you as rather remarkable that the pennant winning teams in the two leagues, who are about to step out and battle for the world's championship, are about the poorest base running aggregation in either league, and their first basemen are fair representatives of the teams.

Luderus is a quiet, phlegmatic and unemotional fellow with considerably more brains than the fans may give him credit for possessing, when they judge from his deliberate movements and lack of enthusiasm. The pitchers tell me that is deceiving in this: that he looks easy to fool, but is just as likely to be fooling the pitcher, for after he has looked bad swinging at one ball he may kick the cover loose from the next one of that kind. He has one bad weakness as a batter and the Boston pitchers undoubtedly know what it is and will try to pitch to it. If they have good control, they can stop him.

Hoblitzel is a different type. He is quiet and undemonstrative, but he has shown symptoms of temperament. He goes into the dumps when things break badly. His failure at Cincinnati was due largely to an attack of grouch against men and conditions. It is not likely that he will have such an attack during the world's series, for he will go into it with high hopes and all keyed up. He is that way—either at one extreme or the other.

By the comparative figures Hoblitzel is the better ball player for this series and neither he nor his rival is likely to cut any great figure in the final results. The big chance for one of them to be a hero is for some Boston pitcher to get careless—and then watch the ball go over that right field wall in Philly.

The difference between these men is not sufficient to give either any decisive claim to superiority—and we must go to the second basemen to learn more.

Get out your pencils and dope them with me tomorrow.

Applications have been pouring in for weeks and are being filed.

Tickets for the right field bleachers, at $1 each, and in the other bleachers, at 50 cents each, will be placed on sale at the grounds before each game. The seating capacity of Braves Field is now being checked up to determine just how many persons can be cared for. No additional stands will be erected, it was said.

CUBS OUT OF LAST PLACE.

Pass Giants by Winning Two Games from Cincinnati.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Chicago pulled out of last place today, thereby passing the Giants, by winning both games of a double-header from Cincinnati by scores of 7 to 2 and 5 to 1. The first game was won in the eighth inning when George weakened and the locals bunched four hits with two bases on balls and clinched the game.

In the second game Chicago got the jump on the visitors by hitting Schneider hard in the first inning and piling up a lead which could not be overcome, owing to the fine pitching of Humphries.

The fielding of Mulligan, the Cubs' recruit shortstop, was a feature.

Manager Bresnahan tried out a new catcher named Wallace in the opening game and he performed in good style. Score:

Whitman Sees Football Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Governor Whitman was an interested spectator of the football practice this afternoon at Union College. He arrived on the campus at 4 o'clock as the guest of Dr. Charles Alexander Richmond, President of the college. Whitman and Dr. Richmond had spoken at the opening of the convention of the Polish National Alliance here earlier in the afternoon. When Governor Whitman walked on the field with President Richmond a crowd of students, assembled on the bleachers to watch practice, immediately recognized him and greeted him with a salvo of college yells. The Governor seemed pleased, and waved his handkerchief in response.

Governor Whitman evinced the keenest interest in the play, and requested that a short scrimmage be held between the Varsity and the scrubs. Although Union had played a hard game last Saturday, the men lined up for fifteen minutes' play. The Governor was keenly delighted with the game, and ran down to the gridiron to watch when one of the Varsity backs carried the ball across.

Another visitor today at Union was Captain Ballin of last year's Princeton Varsity team.

Meader Wins at Olympic A. C.

Dave Meader of the west side, easily outpointed Willie Brown of Harlem, in the feature ten-round bout last night at the Olympic Athletic Club of Harlem. Brown was substituted for Willie Jackson, who appeared at the clubhouse with a broken hand which, he said, he received in a recent bout in Philadelphia. Meader took the offensive at the start and won the honors in the majority of rounds. In the fourth session he floored his opponent with a hard right hand uppercut, but Brown regained his feet and resumed the bout. Meader made a whirlwind finish in the closing round and sent his opponent through the ropes and onto the spectators at the ringside, with a stiff left hook.

The final bout scheduled for ten rounds, in which Charlie Sands of Texas, lightweight and Sec-Saw Kelly, of Philadelphia, were the principals, was stopped by Referee Roche in the sixth session, to save the Philadelphia boxer from taking further punishment. Sands was the aggressor from the start.

In the opening ten-round contest Paul Doyle of the east side, had a shade the better of Danny Fields, a Harlem boxer. This was an interesting bout throughout, and the east sider's advantage at the final bell was a close one.

Early Lead Stirred Boston, but St. Louis's Defense Weakened in Seventh and Lost.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—The Red Sox closed their home season with a victory over the St. Louis Browns today, the win being one of the three necessary for them to clinch the American League championship. The farewell crowd, however, worried a lot in the second inning, when the Browns obtained a three-run lead against Dutch Leonard, and later when the visitors forged ahead again, 4 to 3, in the fifth inning against Boston's star left-hander. But in the seventh the Sox came out of their long batting slump, bunching three fine hits after two passes had provided a start, and thomaking the brace of five runs, winning the game handily 8 to 4.

George Sisler, who seems to have no limitations as a ball player, was chosen by Branch Rickey to pitch the St. Louis wind-up here, and he started out like a real winner, even if he did not have the stamina to finish strong against the fellows who are fighting for the entry into the post-season series. After his own club had laced out three runs against Leonard in the second inning, Sisler fanned three batters in Boston's half, and the eyes of Carrigan's men wearily were turned on the Detroit-Washington figures on the score board. Boston shortly tied the score against Sisler, however, and found him weakening in the seventh. Rickey rushed in his veteran, Wellman, but there was no stopping the Red Sox, who had their eyes on the ball and hit it hard.

The Red Sox won their game on ten hits, while against Leonard, and later the elongated Shore, the Browns connected safely only six times, three of their hits coming in their second session. The Sox defense was airtight, except for a wild throw by Duffy Lewis early in the matinée, and the team's seventh-inning finish surely was real business.

The Boston Braves attended the game and were a discouraged looking lot of ball players.

St. Louis started the game with a vengeance, and there was nothing in their play that looked like intentional assistance to the Sox. In their second inning Pratt opened with a clean hit past Scott. Carrigan allowed him to advance on a passed ball, Pratt going to third, while Leonard threw out Walker at first. After Austin had walked, Lavan brought Pratt home with a hit to left, and when Lewis failed to nip Austin at third he threw over Gardner's head, Austin also scoring and Lavan following immediately on Agnew's single to right field.

The Sox had two men left on bases in the first inning, but in the third scored two runs. Hooper walked and moved to third on Scott's centre field double. Speaker fanned, but Gainer came through with a hit, on which both the runners scored, the Sox then tied the score in the fourth, when Sisler hit Gardner, was touched for two bases by Wagner, and then put in a wild pitch on which Larry waltzed home. The Browns immediately took the lead again in the fifth, however, there being one out when Sisler and Shotton made base hits, Leonard then hitting Howard on the foot, filling the bases. Lee brought Sisler home with a fly to Hooper, while Howard was caught at second base. Sisler went wrong in the seventh, passing Scott for a purpose, then gave Speaker two wide ones and was relieved by Wellman, who completed the pass. Wellman then fanned Gainer, but Lewis singled, and after Gardner had filed to Walker Wagner got a hit, and then Pinch-hitter Casey came through with another. Five runs was the product and, with the game safe, Shore finished out the string without allowing a visitor to reach first base. The score:

DARTMOUTH'S NEW FOOTBALL MATERIAL

Problems Confronting "The Green" and Coach Cavanaugh —Good Ends Assured.

Dartmouth is looking forward to a season of hard work on the gridiron, for, while the material is good, hardly any of it could be called exactly ready made, and at present there seems to be a dearth of ends and quarter backs. It is a little too early to hazard a guess as to just what sort of a team the Green will have, but those who have followed Frank Cavanaugh's work closely in the past are expecting him to develop good ends, for end coaching is one of his specialties, and a good—perhaps even a very good—line from tackle to tackle, with almost a certainty that Speer, who made a reputation for himself at guard last year, will be the rock on which that line is founded.

Behind the line there will be many new faces, for Cavanaugh lost seven backs last year, all of them good. Dartmouth has developed not a few men behind the line who had little reputation before entering college, however—some of them never heard of in New York until their appearance in the Princeton game. The schedule leading up to that match is not any heavier this year than usual, and, as in the past, there will be little opportunity to size up the eleven from Hanover until it tackles the Tigers.

It will be interesting to see whether with new men the Dartmouth coach can build up an attack with as much drive as last year's against Princeton and later against Pennsylvania. In some respects the Princeton game is to Dartmouth what the Army game was to Yale some years ago. It generally marks a well-defined step in the progress of the eleven, the New Hampshire men finding the experience of so hard a contest just the thing needed at just the right time to make sure that the team comes up to its top form in time for the game with Pennsylvania to be played this year in Boston.

For some reason or other Dartmouth seems to make more serious mistakes against Princeton than against any other eleven. Last year the generalship collapsed, and although the Green showed some remarkably fine football in the Palmer Stadium, the choice of plays and the holding off of some excellent forward passing until too late to mix it in with a powerful running game, spoiled many a good chance to carry the fight into the enemy's territory. It is for that reason that the coach is bending every effort toward developing a first-class quarter back who will be expected to retrieve the errors of former years in the course of the annual invasion of Princeton.

The location of Hanover is both an advantage and a disadvantage in a football way. Dartmouth is out of touch with life, which has been carried to a more advanced and attractive stage than at any other institution, has drawn good material from all parts of the country, and the baseball field in the gymnasium, protected from the elements, made it possible for Cavanaugh to get in a deal of preliminary work sheltered from the sun, while other coaches had to drill their squads in the blazing heat. On the other hand, the team has to make long journeys for some of its games, and the schedule making is no easy problem. One thing is certain, the Dartmouth men will know the rules if it is possible to teach them, for their coach maintains that a clear knowledge of the playing code wins games, and he is right. He has been holding classes with all the strictness of an instructor in mathematics, and the results ought to show when the eleven gets into real action.

Louden, Redfield, and Hoban have been helping Cavanaugh, and Murdock was also able to spend some time on the backs, the best of whom at present is probably Gerrish, although those who saw the Dartmouth-Princeton game this year are expecting much of Thielscher, who played so well that day. Captain McAuliffe at tackle, Gile, and Speer are the figures in the line who are familiar to those who watched the Green in its big games a season ago. Dartmouth opens with the Massachusetts Agricultural College, which, under the coaching of Brides, the old Yale back and line man, sometimes turns out formidable elevens. The next game with Maine will be interesting, since the team from Orono is under Western coaching, Hughitt, a pupil of Yost's, and Michigan's quarter back last season, being in charge, but there seems to be nothing to fear in Tufts or Norwich, and the Dartmouth men will have to get their first hard experience against Princeton the following Saturday.

Dartmouth and Brown have buried the hatchet at last, and they will play home-and-home games in the future, but the old annual meeting at Springfield is not to be revived, both institutions preferring an early season game.

Brown's problem, too, is the development of a backfield, but unlike Dartmouth, the Providence men can begin operations with a first-class quarterback in command. Murphy, who played so brilliantly against Cornell last year, ought to fill Clark's place nicely. For the rest, the new men out for backfield posts are not as heavy as they ought to be, and will need a lot of hard coaching into the bargain. Ed Robinson, head coach, has plenty of line material at hand, and the quality appears to be high. Give Robinson a good line, and he is apt to shake at least a fair backfield together.

While the season was not particularly successful last year, the team being below the average, there are few abler men at devising a deceptive attack than Robinson, and there are no coaching problems at Brown such as are disturbing other institutions. The eleven will open the season with Rhode Island State, a team that is sometimes troublesome, but will then have to tackle Trinity, an eleven coached by J. B. Price, the old Ursinus man, who, with anything like good material, can give the best of them a busy afternoon. Amherst and Williams come along in quick succession, and Williams probably will be a handful. Syracuse, a team that has a habit of developing rather early, follows Williams, and then come Yale and Harvard, both in the final stages of their preparation for their own big battle. Brown's schedule is a pretty stiff one, and it is well that there are so many candidates for the line to stand the wear and tear.

More Men Out at Columbia.

Six new men, bringing the total up to 49, reported to Coach Metcalf for Columbia football yesterday at morning and afternoon practices. In the morning special attention was devoted to candidates for the back field, end, and centre positions. The centres had a passing cage to use and the ends had a stiff workout in running down punts. Simonds, a crew man, is a consistent booter and his spirals average sixty yards. Donoho and Cochrane also tried kicking.

Afternoon practice was particularly for the linemen, but even the men who reported in the morning showed up in togs again at 3 o'clock. Four elevens were picked, but with no attempt at classification, and the lines were pitted against each other in light scrimmage work. Mumford, '16, is a new man out for the centre position. He looms up as a prominent candidate because of his previous football training on the Princeton second eleven two years ago. Rex Reeder, '16, is another line candidate. He played with Dartmouth freshmen two years ago, and he is now eligible for the Columbia eleven because of a year's residence on Morningside Heights last year. "Jeff" Healey of Columbia basket ball fame, tried out for tackle. He is big and rangy and should prove a valuable acquisition. T. A. Robinson, '17; E. H. Babcock, Jr., '16, and S. P. Cook, '17, were also fitted out with new uniforms.

Coach Metcalfe announced that there would be no scrimmage until probably Saturday, and tentative plans call for a practice game on that afternoon. He has the assistance of several volunteer coaches daily, and in a day or two the candidates will be definitely separated into the positions on the team they seek. At yesterday's practices Henderson and Stimson, former Oberlin College players; H. L. Moffett of last year's Pennsylvania team, and "Ike" Telfer former Clinton High and later Dartmouth College end, took charge of small squads for individual coaching.

Wolgast Fouls Waugh and Loses.

SHREVEPORT, La., Sept. 27.—Bobby Waugh of Fort Worth, lightweight, received the decision on a foul tonight in the sixth round of a scheduled fifteen-round bout over Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion. The question of a foul was decided by a physician, who was called into the ring when Waugh fell to the floor.

YALE'S RUSH LINE WEAK.

Saturday's Game Against Maine Showed It Lost Its "Backbone."

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 27.—Yale's football practice was light today. The regulars spent the afternoon listening to a recital of their faults as displayed against Maine University eleven last Saturday. "Pinkie" Dunbar, the new defensive coach, pointed out their errors to the members of the rush line which lost its backbone in the final five minutes of Saturday's game. Dunbar was shocked when he saw the Maine backs outwitting the Yale line, and he has expressed his feelings about the matter.

There was signal drill for the Yale first string squad, but no changes were ordered in the line-up. Several shifts will take place, however, before Virginia reaches here Saturday. Black, a guard; Hutchinson, quarter back for the freshmen last year, and Carl Betts, a 'Varsity regular right guard, are expected to be eligible to play against Virginia. Black is expected to prove one of Yale's best guards. Carl White, centre last season, rejoined the squad.

Yale football received a boost today when four stalwart Exeter players, Kirkpatrick, Comerford, Lynch, and Bolton, joined the freshman squad. Kirkpatrick and Comerford had been reported headed for Harvard along with Ed Casey, the Exeter captain of last season. The four compose the most valuable quartet of preparatory school players who will go to any university this Fall. Callahan, the Andover centre, is another preparatory school star who came to Yale today.

The squad numbered forty men today and a registration of fifty was promised for tomorrow. "Billy" Marting, former 'Varsity centre and last season's coach of the centres, and "Doc" Corbus, last year's quarter back coach and former quarter back, took charge of the freshman squad. Marting has a contract as freshman coach for several seasons, an innovation this season. There was half an hour of football today between the second and third elevens, the third team humiliating their rivals by scoring two touchdowns and forcing them to a safety.

After a week's absence "Chub" Sheldon and Hermann Von Holt reported today and played the tackle positions on the second team.

NEWS OF OTHER TEAMS.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 27.—On account of the opening game of the season tomorrow with Gettysburg, Cornell today did practically nothing except run through signals. While the visiting team is not expected to prove a formidable opponent the Ithacans have been driven so hard in the first ten days of preliminary drill that they looked tired in Saturday's practice game, and the coaches decided to give them a rest. The Gettysburg's game—which establishes a precedent here because there are no admission—will give the students their first opportunity of seeing the new players in action. Three members of last year's freshman eleven, Miller, Gillies, and Shiverick, will be in the 'Varsity line-up, as will four former substitutes, Zander, Eckley, Jameson, and Kleinert. Miller, the latest man to make his 'Varsity debut, is a big, husky guard whose work has attracted the attention of Dan Reed and who stands in a fair way of beating Snyder, last year's substitute for the position. The 'Varsity training table will start tomorrow with twenty men, comprising practically all of the leading candidates in the various departments.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 27.—The Army entered the stretch today in the preparations for the opening game with Holy Cross next Saturday, but there was hardly more than a limbering up exercise, most of the 'Varsity men laying off after Saturday's hard scrimmage. Two elevens ran through a sharp signal drill and the punters got into a brief kicking bee. The Army is relying on Ford and Coffin to fill Mills's shoes this year, and both men did well in the high wind prevailing this afternoon. Bringham's work in the back field and Goodman's tackling play continues to please the coaches.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 27.—The Navy squad had only a light practice this evening after the strenuous work of the last week. The afternoon was spent in running through signals and practising forward passes. Handicapped the ends to himself today, training them in defensive playing and breaking up interference. Ingram took the line men and instructed them in rudimentary football and how to play their respective positions. A notable visitor to the field during the practice was Babe Brown, the former husky All-American centre guard. He will assist in the instruction today, but will in all probability join the coaching staff tomorrow for a short while.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 27.—Secret prac will be held by the Rutgers football team every day this week in preparation for the game with Princeton Saturday. A corps of coaches is expected to arrive to help Foster Sanford develop the Rutgers' attack. The work in the line showed most promise on Saturday, was most promising, but every effort will be made within the next few days to smooth off some of the rough edges shown in the 'Varsity attack. Albright, the 'Varsity centre, will be in uniform again tomorrow. He has been out of the game with a back knee for the past few days, but is expected to be in good shape by Saturday. Wittnenn and Kelley, half backs, are also believed to be in good enough condition to withstand a hard contest. They were both kept on the side lines of the Albright game. The work of the two new men, Hasbrouck and Elliott, is most encouraging. Both pierced the Albright defense for long gains and may start against Princeton. This will keep Bracher, Wittpenn, and Bowlby in reserve. The Rutgers line showed its usual defensive power when Albright failed to make a single first down. The men are in excellent condition and hope to give the Tigers a hard battle.

EASTON, Penn., Sept. 27.—Varying the usual practice for Monday afternoon, Coach Crowell put his Lafayette football squad through a strenuous drill this afternoon, which lasted an hour. The showing of the line in the game with Muhlenberg on Saturday was such that it was necessary to get the defenders more naturally into the habit of repelling attacks and sustaining the runners. The 'Varsity was instructed to take the ball and run it the whole length of the field without regard to downs, and then the scrubs took it. The work of all the linemen was somewhat better than it was on Saturday. Maxfield sustained a sprained ankle in the game and was on the side lines on crutches. He will be back in the game within a few days. Captain Fred Luhr was also inactive during the practice, but he had sustained nothing but a few bruises.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Sept. 27.—Lehigh started football work today in hammer and tongs fashion for the Carlisle Indian game next Saturday. A long scrimmage wound up the hard day's work. During the first part of the scrimmage Coach Keady gave particular attention to his new half backs, Belind, Hazletine, and Heuer. Time after time, they had the ball and all showed marked improvement over last week's form, tearing big holes in the line. The three sets of backs were used during the afternoon and several sets of ends, Green and Sawtelle, Bigelow, and Kirkpatrick, and Nutter and Chapman being the first three choices. Heuer, Cahill, and Green did considerable punting today. Heuer's work not quite being up to the mark of the others, but he looks promising.

TIGERS SWARM ON PRINCETON FIELDS

Sixty-seven Men Out for Football—Getting Ready for Rutgers.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 27.—A total of sixty-seven men reporting at University Field in football togs for daily practice caused more of a smile of satisfaction to come over the face of "Speedy" Rush today than has been in evidence all season. The freshman field was covered with candidates, too, so that the place took on the appearance of real activity. The 'Varsity candidates were divided into two squads, thirty-six men being put in the first squad, while the remainder were assigned to the scrubs. Some of the more important of the new men were Tibbott, regular half back of last year, who has been laid up by tonsilitis since the start of Fall practice; Nourse, who was used at both tackle and centre during last season and who has just arrived from his Colorado home, and Lamberton, who has been busy with his studies since his arrival at Princeton.

The afternoon was a long one, but very little scrimmaging was engaged in. After a blackboard talk in the field house, wherein Saturday's game was gone over in detail, the men were divided into squads for individual instruction. The linemen practiced starting, charging, and blocking; the ends were drilled in holding forward passes, while the back-field men were instructed in getting their plays off quicker. It was late in the afternoon when Rush put the first 'Varsity against the first scrubs for a ten-minute scrimmage.

The three scrub teams had been drilled all afternoon on the Rutgers formations which were noted last Saturday, and essayed to go through the 'Varsity by the use of these plays. Several times the 'Varsity was caught off guard by the quick formations of the scrubs, but as a rule the first-line men held up well.

The second 'Varsity was allowed to scrimmage against the scrubs for fifteen minutes, Rutgers plays being again in evidence. Building up a defense against the Rutgers formations will occupy the men during the first part of the week.

Some important shifts were made. Keating was at end on the first squad, and showed up well. Lamberton appeared at half back, and he will be kept in the back field, if possible, as the coaches need more heavy material back of the line. The presence of Tibbott added greatly to the strength of the regulars. He played half back, while Driggs and Shea were his mates. Ames ran the team through the scrimmage, but Glick took them through signals afterward.

Varied Drill for N. Y. U. Footballists

With yesterday's practice the New York University football squad began a week of rigorous work in preparation for its opening game with R. P. I. next Saturday. Coaches Reilly and Gorsch continued to drill the Violet candidates in fundamental football, although a varied programme of drop kicking, punting, signal work and a short scrimmage also formed an important part of the practice. Cann, the former High School of Commerce star, Egan of the Manual Training High School, and Erwig of last year's Morris High School eleven, showed up especially well in the kicking. Cann and Egan dropped the ball over the horizontal bar from various distances and from a number of difficult angles. For the line men some additional work in breaking up interference, and for the ends and tackles in particular yesterday's practice involved some hard work and it was from this division that Coach Reilly put forth most of his effort. Candidates for the extremities of the line, including Waldman and McCullogh, both of whom are veterans in the game, came in for a share of this work as it is in the make-up of the 'Varsity line that the Violet coaches have expressed the greatest anxiety. Some general work in handling and running back punts for the backfield men and for candidates for the line positions, tackling and defensive work, formed an important part of the routine. The 'Varsity line-up yesterday included a new candidate in Willman, the husky-looking colored tackle who comes from the Cushing Academy, and who played at left guard in the Violet line yesterday. Among the squad men who reported was Draper, a quarterback from the New Haven High School.

Fordham Weeds Out Ineligibles.

"Hank" Miles has been declared ineligible for the Fordham eleven. Miles had been chosen for tackle on the first team and had been putting up a fine game in practice. He came to Fordham this year from Washington and Lee and on coming to Fordham Coach Foran claimed that he was still eligible to play. However, after inquiry it was asserted by Physical Director Pollock of Washington and Lee that Miles was ineligible, having won his insignia in 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914.

As Shea a former Springfield college player who also was a candidate for the tackle position was declared ineligible last week, Fordham will have to depend on May and Mulcahy to fill in the tackle positions this year. They were both regular tackles a year ago, but Miles and Shea had the benefit of more college experience.

Another man to feel the sting of the new athletic index system at Fordham yesterday was Ott, former halfback at Colgate. In company with Genesee, centre on Colgate last Fall, Ott tried to enter the Fordham Medical School but they were both found to be lacking several essentials for matriculation.

Dies of Football Injuries.

LIMA, Ohio, Sept. 27.—The first fatality in connection with the present football season was recorded here today when Don Applas, 15, prospective guard on the Lima High School team, died from injuries received in practice game. His teammates will act as pallbearers at the funeral Wednesday morning.

K. O. Sweeney Puts Toland Out.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 27.—At the Knickerbocker A. C. tonight Knockout Sweeney of New York lived up to his title by knocking out Jack Toland of Philadelphia in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout. Toland was no match for Sweeney at any stage of the contest. Toland was knocked down three times in the decisive round before he went down for the full count. The Quaker City boy displayed some skill as a boxer.

ELEVEN MINERS ENTOMBED.

Caught by a Sudden Rush of Culm in Pennsylvania Colliery.

LANSFORD, Penn., Sept. 27.—Eleven miners, six Americans and five foreigners, employed in the Foster tunnel of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, at Coaldale, two miles from here, were entombed shortly before noon today by a sudden rush of culm and water that had broken through the roof from an abandoned working. Gangs of men summoned from other collieries worked in half-hour shifts this afternoon and tonight in an effort to stem the flow of water that was piling up the barrier of culm, dirt, and coal behind which the men are held prisoners, but from reports of company officials it will be late tomorrow morning before the men can be rescued.

Shortly before the whistle blew, it was explained, the crash came and the roof fell at close intervals for a distance of 200 feet. Whether the entombed men are behind this fall or were caught under it could not be determined tonight. Company officials seemed to cling to the theory that the men were behind the mass of débris, believing that they had been warned of the fall and had run further back to a place of safety.

AWAITS PEOPLE'S VOICE.

Will Decide Between Republic and Monarchy, Says Chinese President.

PEKING, Sept. 27.—President Yuan Shih-kai today replied to the recent suggestion of Parliament that there should be immediate action to determine whether the people want a monarchy or a republic by stating that the decision must await the vote of the citizens' convention.

"The responsibility for passing the Constitution devolves upon the Citizens' Convention," said President Yuan. "As the question concerns the nation's foundation it is imperative that we proceed carefully. We already have fixed Nov. 20 for the final elections. When these are completed the convention will be inaugurated, and we then shall ascertain the people's opinion."

Whitney to Build New Hangars.

Harry Payne Whitney of Westbury contemplates the erection of a number of hangars on the site of the old shipyard on Manhasset Bay at Port Washington. Mr. Whitney, who recently announced that he will make flights on Long Island in his hydroaeroplane, applied to the Town Board of North Hempstead for the lease of land at Barrow Beach on Hempstead Harbor at Roslyn to erect several hangars. Yesterday the board was informed that Mr. Whitney had decided to make the flights over Manhasset Bay instead of in Hempstead Harbor.

NEW SWISS WAR CHARITY.

It Is Proposed to Care for Consumptive Soldiers of Belligerents.

Switzerland, which has already rendered noble service to the refugees and repatriated wounded of both France and Germany, is contemplating the establishment within her borders of convalescent homes for those war invalids who are not sufficiently recovered to be safely sent to their own countries. It is proposed to make a beginning by sending those who have contracted tuberculosis in the arms es to such health resorts as Davos, Leysin, and Arosa.

If the program is adopted the invalids will be grouped according to nationality, and arrangements will probably be made with their respective Governments to guarantee that they do not abuse the comparative liberty which is deemed necessary for their cure by attempting to escape from the country. It is even suggested that they may be allowed to receive visits from their families.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The weather has become much cooler in the Middle Atlantic States, New England, the Ohio Valley, and cool weather continues over the Great Lakes and the Northwest.

Temperatures have risen somewhat in the middle plains States and the Southwest, and the weather continues warm in the Gulf and South Atlantic States.

There have been rains in the last twenty-four hours in the Ohio and Upper Mississippi Valleys, the north plains States, and the north Rocky Mountain region. Fair weather prevailed generally elsewhere.

Indications are that the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday in the States east of the Mississippi River, except that rains are probable in Florida and the extreme Upper Mississippi Valley.

Temperature will be somewhat lower in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and Tennessee, and it will change little in other sections east of the Mississippi during the next forty-eight hours.

The tropical storm was central Monday night over extreme western Cuba and advancing northward to the Gulf of Mexico. This storm is of considerable intensity and will be attended by dangerous winds over the East Gulf of Mexico during the next two days. All vessels and other interests have been advised accordingly. Storm warnings are displayed on the Florida coast from Tampa Bay, Key West and Miami.

Winds for Tuesday and Wednesday along the North Atlantic Coast will be strong west, diminishing; Middle Atlantic Coast, fresh west; South Atlantic Coast, moderate, variable, except increasing east off South Florida coast.

STANDARD OIL MEN TO TURN OUT DYES

Reported Buying U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Lackawanna Steel, and Tennessee Copper.

To Spend Millions to Develop Manufacture of Colors and Hold Field Against Germany.

Standard Oil interests, working in close harmony with leading spirits in the du Pont powder concerns, are working out plans to enter the dyestuff manufacturing field on a vast scale, according to information obtained in the financial district yesterday. Already the groundwork has been laid through heavy investments by Standard Oil men in stock of the United States Industrial Alcohol Company, whose output of denatured alcohol has been greatly increased since the demand for war munitions began to tax the country's distilling resources. Standard Oil money is also said to be going into stock of the Lackawanna Steel Company, which erected a benzol plant last Fall and has for several months been turning out 4,000 gallons per day of that basic chemical in the manufacture of dyes.

Sulphuric acid is another chemical needed by dyemakers, and the work of Standard Oil buyers has been detected in the recent accumulation of Tennessee Copper Company shares. It is said that control has been bought, but no confirmation is obtainable. The Tennessee company is a large producer of acid, and has been making heavy monthly deliveries to the du Pont Powder Company since midsummer.

These are the only corporations which have as yet figured directly in news regarding the latest activities of Standard Oil interests. It is understood that others are being developed gradually by the same interests, with the purpose of combining their resources under a single organization when the time is ripe.

Standard Oil officers have been studying the dyestuff industry ever since the war cut off Germany's supplies from this country. Many of the elements needed have been prepared by the oil companies as by-products for years, and others, it is said, can easily be evolved if a market is found. Practically all the constituents of dyes are produced either from coal or petroleum, and the sponsors of the new undertaking are putting themselves in position to command all of them at a minimum cost of production.

The du Pont concerns occupy a position which makes the manufacture of dyes a source of possible profit on an enormous scale. At the present time the different organizations in the du Pont system are working overtime turning out picric acid, toluol, phenol, and other chemicals for powder making. Plant capacity is being increased, and when the war ends the plants will be set for the continued output of these chemicals for the dyestuff industry.

Persons familiar with the tentative plans under discussion state that when the project is launched preparations will have been made for spending many millions of dollars. It is realized that nothing short of a comprehensive output of dyes will prevent the return of German manufacturers to the American markets after the war ends.

OPTIMISM IN TEXAS.

Dallas Man Says Confidence Is Keyed Up from the Feeling Here.

S. G. Davis, President of the S. G. Davis Hat Company of Dallas, Texas, one of the largest wholesale hat concerns in the Southwest, said yesterday in closing his buying here for the Fall that he had placed orders totaling 100 per cent more than he bought a year ago. He regards the outlook for business in the Southwest this Fall and Winter as the best for many years.

"I cannot speak for any other section of the country," said Mr. Davis yesterday at the Biltmore, "but the merchant in Texas certainly takes his cue from the feeling in New York. If the manufacturers and merchants here are optimistic and the Texas merchant hears about it and really believes what he hears, the effect is remarkable.

"There is no question that we key our confidence after the feeling in New York. When the feeling is good here it reflects upon us. And I am confident that this is going to be a great season for business with us. For one thing, whereas cotton was only 7 cents a year ago it is now 11¾. For another thing, most merchants down there have not bought anything to speak of for a couple of years. Another reason is that people who have planted grain have made good crops.

"The only menace to the individual prosperity of the average Texan is furnished by the automobile and the moving picture. Every farmer thinks he must have one of the former, and everybody is running to the movies. Of course, if he only took in a show a week it would not mean much to the farmer, but he and his family want to attend every performance. I figure that those two industries will have corraled about all the loose money there is in this country at the end of the next ten years."

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Duties Sometimes Depend on the Use an Article Is Put To.

Progress was made yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in clearing the files of thousands of jewelry protests filed under the Tariff act of 1909. The Collector classified a large variety of ornaments as "articles of personal adornment," and took duty at 85 per cent. ad valorem. The board sustained the claim of the importers, and held the merchandise to be jewelry dutiable at 60 per cent. The protestants included A. & H. Veith, K. Yamazaki, Salim Elias & T. Abdoo, the Maloney Company, Hecht, Stern & Co., S. Stern, M. J. Corbett & Co., and Alice & Hochster.

W. H. Bailey & Co., Philadelphia, lost in a contention for lower duty on galvanized steel hawser wire. Duty was levied at the rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem as round steel wire, while the claim was for free entry as galvanized wire of the kind commonly used for fencing purposes. Judge Fischer said that the proof offered fell far short of establishing a common use for the wire in question for fencing. At the hearing the witness for the importer conceded that the wire was made and used for various purposes. As he was not able to give even an approximate estimate of the quantity used for fencing, the Collector was affirmed.

Thomas Crane went before the board with the claim that automatic labeling machines composed in chief value of metal and designed to paste labels on tin cans were machine tools. Collector Malone classified the machines as metal manufactures, and took duty under the tariff at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem. The claim was for entry at 15 per cent. Judge Fischer, in chief value, the machines failed to respond to the Congressional definition of what constitutes a machine tool. The Collector was affirmed.

BRANDEIS ADVISES JEWS.

Says They Must Organize to Aid Brethren After the War.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 27.—In an address delivered in the Baltimore Opera House tonight Louis D. Brandeis urged the necessity of unity among the Jews in order to aid their brethren in Europe after the war. Mr. Brandeis said that not only lasting unity was necessary, but that it must be an active unity. He also said that the conference proposed for Oct. 24 by the American Jewish Committee would not only be futile but dangerous. He based this opinion upon the fact that its deliberations would be secret and that its mandate would lack the united support of the Jews in this country.

"When the war ends the Jews of America hope to aid in the solution of those problems which most deeply affect their brethren abroad," said the speaker. "Every one recognizes that without unity this is impossible. But many fail to understand what unity means, and what the essential conditions of unity are. When the meaning of unity is made clear, and these essential conditions set forth, it must appear that a congress is indispensable if the end sought is to be attained.

"The conference which the American Jewish Committee proposed should be held on Oct. 24 would be not only futile but dangerous. It would be futile because the conference would purport to be an assembly authorized to express the will of the Jewish people, whereas it would in fact have no such mandate, and would lack the necessary support of the Jews of America without which its action would be ineffective.

H. U. MUDGE RESIGNS.

Rock Island Receiver Asks Judge Carpenter to Relieve Him.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—H. U. Mudge, one of the receivers of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, resigned today. Judge Carpenter of the United States Circuit Court, to whom the resignation was submitted, refused to accept it until he consulted Judge Dickinson, formerly Secretary of War, the other receiver.

Mr. Mudge emphatically denied that any friction in the receivership proceedings had caused him to resign.

"My resignation was entirely voluntary," he said. "I feel that two receivers are not necessary. I am an operating railroad man—not a lawyer. There has been absolutely no friction between me and the other receiver. There is no necessity for divided responsibility."

TO DETERMINE WEIGHT.

Order by Treasury Department for Imported Merchandise.

The Treasury Department has issued an order that duty is to be assessed on imported merchandise upon the weight shown in the weigher's return, and in the gauger's return in case of gaugeable merchandise. When merchandise liable to shrinkage on the voyage of importation shows a loss of weight the attention of appraising officers must be called to the weigher's return in order that the unit value may be advanced if necessary.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...3¾@3¾ per cent. for the best names
Saturday...3¾@3¾ " " " " "
The quotations are for six months' paper.

The Cloth for Warmth.

It is fairly definitely established that the cloth which the warring nations will require for their troops during the coming Winter campaign will consist of worsted and wool. Worsted of itself does not give the warmth necessary, although it is longer wearing than wool. Serges, according to one authority, will not figure as prominently in army contracts as formerly for this reason. There is some talk, however, of a coming order to supply the men of Great Britain's navy with serge uniforms. The ideal cloth for use in Winter uniforms is described as one containing a worsted warp and a wool filling. The worsted gives strength and the wool warmth.

Supplying the Belligerents.

As soon as the war loan has been arranged those who are interested in the contracts from the belligerents expect a rush of orders to be received in the piece goods market. The Italian order for overcoats, uniforms and blankets is now being made up, but further contracts are held up temporarily, it is understood, until the exchange rate becomes more favorable. The English order, according to all reports, has not yet been given out, although two of the leading factors in the market are credited with having received all but official sanction for closing up the negotiations. Spanish buying commissioners are here ready to place orders, and Greece will also be ready to buy within a short time.

Afraid of Novelties.

Orders that are being turned in by shoe salesmen now out with Spring lines show that, while the retailers are buying staple goods well, in spite of the advances made necessary by the higher raw material costs, they are going very slowly on the novelty offerings. The style situation on novelties for Spring is none too clear as yet, and it is so easy to lose money on this merchandise that the trade is buying very carefully. In fact, most of the novelty stuff taken is said to be that which is now looked on, by wholesalers at least, as semi-staple goods. While spot business in Fall shoes is improving from day to day, a run of really cool weather is needed to bring the duplicate orders for these goods up to the point desired by the jobbers.

Heavyweights in Demand.

The piece goods market is beginning to feel a growing demand for heavyweight goods. The weather has had a good deal to do with the increased call for goods of this character, both from the men's wear and women's wear branches of the cutting up trade. The scarcity of merchandise which was predicted some time ago is now actual, and buyers are having a hard time finding what they desire. Heavyweights are sold at a premium by those mills that have them, and very few have. Between the amount of machinery taken up with war contracts and the slackening up of operations through the dyestuff shortage, very little in the way of stock goods was made up during the time usually devoted to such operations.

About Colored Cottons.

According to opinions expressed in the local cotton goods trade, the lower prices that have been made on the leading lines of dress ginghams for the Spring season will result in a generally improved demand for this merchandise, something which, it is said, it can stand very nicely, as ginghams have not gone really big for some time. Already there are evidences that the jobbers are looking for an improved demand from their retail trade, and are preparing to meet it. Staple ginghams, percales, chambrays, corduroy, madras, tickings, and other colored cottons are showing improved movement, it is said, and where higher prices, as a result of the rising costs of the raw materials, are not already in force, they are in prospect for the near future.

For Detained Russian Goods.

With the arrival yesterday of a supply of application blanks at the branch office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Custom House active work was begun to secure the release of heavy consignments of merchandise purchased by American importers, but held in Russia owing to the embargo on exportations. Merchants or their representatives thronged the bureau's offices all day eager to obtain the blanks and make out the formal requests for delivery. These, after being passed upon by E. E. Porter, commercial agent in charge of the New York office, will be referred to the Russian Imperial Commercial Attaché. If the latter official approves the applications they will be sent to Petrograd for final action. It is believed that most of the applications will be approved.

Dress Goods Are Doing Well.

Reports from jobbing circles say that a nice seasonable business is being done in dress goods. All sorts of plain goods are in demand, while a good business is also being done on poplins, broadcloths, garbardines, and serges. Coating velours are being taken well. On these and other goods both initial and duplicate orders are being taken, the best part of it, it is said, being supplied by the "specials." Many of the road men on either out or preparing to go out with Spring goods. Duplicate business from the jobbing trade is stimulating seasonable goods in the primary market to a considerable extent, and similar orders from out-of-town jobbers, many of whose salesmen are turning in good business for Spring, are resulting in an improved demand for those goods here. This is said to be especially true of the staple goods.

Mill Treasurers Are Working.

In addition to assisting in the enriching of the telephone and telegraph companies through the many exchanges of both kinds of messages between the mills and the commission houses these days, the present antics of the cotton market are giving the Treasurers of the various cotton mills which have gray goods more real work than has been their allotment for some time. With thirteen-cent cotton not wholly improbable, these gentlemen are pretty much at sea as to what to do about future business, the extent of their "voyages" being governing by the amount of cheap cotton their mills still have on hand. The gray goods now selling for spot delivery are said to be moving at prices about equal to ten-cent cotton, which leaves a nice margin of profit for the mill that still has some of last year's cheap cotton in its storehouse. But where there is none of this cotton there is another story to tell.

Gray Goods Prices Firmer.

There was more active buying in the local gray goods market here yesterday as a result of the further rise in cotton, with buyers particularly anxious to get goods for the future deliveries. The mills, on the other hand, save in isolated cases where fear exists that the strength of cotton is artificial, were unwilling to trade ahead unless prices were bid that suited their fancy. In some quarters, deliveries beyond the end of the year will not be considered. Sales of 38½-inch 60-52s were made for spot and nearby delivery at 4½ cents, while 60-48s in that width sold for similar delivery at 4 cents. Further sales of 38½-inch 64-60s were made at 4⅝ cents, with several mills asking 4¼ cents. Only a few of those goods are still to be had at 4⅝ cents, and they only for immediate delivery. More sales were made at 5⅛ cents on 39-inch 56-44s, which are getting scarce at that price, while 68-72s, 72-76s and 80 squares, in that width sold at the figures given below. Narrow goods were firmer:

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Very Active and Strong —Railroads React — War News Important Factor.

Trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday reached the largest volume attained in four years practically to a day. One has to go back to Sept. 26, 1911, to find a total as great as that which marked yesterday's increase in speculative enthusiasm, which for a time extended to the entire list, but which in the later hours of the day was confined to the industrial issues.

The war news came as a surprise, and as such exerted all the greater influence. The market, so far as it had consciously related itself to the news from the war area, had come to look upon German victories as a matter of course, though convinced all the while that a change in the news was sure to come. The successes of the French and English against the Germans in France which was related in yesterday morning's papers were sufficiently spectacular to give this news real market force, and it added much to the optimism with which traders enlarged their commitments the while bidding up prices in a manner which recalled the most impetuous of the markets which we have had this year.

More came to be heard of war orders and of mergers of companies enjoying war-order prosperity. The report of the entry into the Baldwin Locomotive Company of interests which have been conspicuously successful in obtaining war orders and repeated rumors of a proposed merger of a number of independent steel companies were of a sort to stimulate the imagination of traders and of a kind to encourage their venturing further into the untried field of higher prices. The news concerning the foreign loan negotiations, bearing out as it did the understanding had last week that the Anglo-French Commission and our bankers had reached an agreement on the loan, added its quota to the constructive factors which caused yesterday's great broadening out of the movement which was under way at the close of last week.

One of the conspicuous features of that movement was the marked strength of the railroad shares, and for a time these stocks were maintained on their course yesterday, but after making further gains they halted, and before the close had lost in most cases all of the ground which they had made in the first hour of trading, and even more. Probably the two chief things which led to this reversal by the railroads were the news of the passing of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas into receivership and the shifting of traders' interest from the railroads to the industrials, when the traders saw that the industrials were moving in a way which promised a renewal of rapid advances in that group, a promise which was amply borne out in many stocks before the day closed. There was some talk of foreign selling of the railroads, but this could hardly have been an important factor in bringing about the reaction, for it would appear from the results attending the bids which this market sent to the London market yesterday that the foreign selling was very small, certainly small compared with the volume of dealings here.

The great increase in activity and the marked rise in prices was no doubt due to a conjuction of news which stimulated trading enthusiasm, but this news was sown in a fertile field, for market sentiment had been leaning to the expectation of such a renewal of the forward swing and it seized willingly upon the news which promised to help such a movement. It would be difficult to reconcile what went on in the stock market yesterday with any theory that the fever of speculation, greatly encouraged by the market successes already attained this year, has yet died down.

COTTON PRICES SOAR AND CLOSE STRONG

Another Advance of About $2 a Bale Sends Market to New High Levels.

BULLISH NEWS CIRCULATED

Production of 60 to 70 Per Cent. of Normal Indicated, According to One Estimate.

Cotton yesterday registered another advance of about two dollars a bale, with prices again reaching new high levels. Trading was on a very large scale, and at no time was there a reaction of more than 10 points from the highest level. The market closed strong around the best figures of the day.

Southern spot markets were strong. New Orleans quotations represented an advance of nearly two dollars a bale over the quotations of Saturday. The Memphis Commercial Appeal in its weekly review stated that the crop was about half picked, and that indications pointed to a production of 60 per cent. to 70 per cent. of normal. If this estimate means what it says and is applied to a normal production of 15,000,000 bales, it means that The Memphis Commercial Appeal, a reputable authority on the cotton trade, believes the crop will be between 9,000,000 and 10,500,000 bales.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were strong, 25 to 40 points advance. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 30 points advance, 12 cents for middling. Futures closed strong.

DEFENDS GLUCOSE COMPANY

Witness Says He Always Found Competition in Its Products.

The history of the Corn Products Refining Company was reviewed yesterday by Frederick T. Fisher, Secretary and Treasurer of the company, at the hearing of the Government suit in the Whitehall Building to determine whether the company was maintaining a monopoly.

Mr. Fisher explained at length what had been done with the various plants. The company had spent all together nearly $14,000,000 for the reconstruction of old or the building of new plants, he said. The witness produced a diagram which showed that the corn ground by the plants taken over by the defendant in the year prior to their consolidation by the formation of the concern amounted to 36,000,000 bushels; that the amount ground in the year ended Feb. 28, 1913, the day before the filing of the Government's suit, was about 22,500,000 bushels, and the amount ground in the year ended Dec. 31, 1914, was about $29,000,000 bushels.

O. J. Moore, Secretary and Treasurer of C. Shenkberg & Co., wholesale grocers of Sioux City, Iowa, said he had always found competition in the starch and syrup lines. The hearing will be continued today.

BOOK ON SOUTH AMERICA.

Department of Commerce Issues a Volume on Trade Conditions There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—To encourage the development of commercial relations with South American countries, the Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce has issued a volume entitled "Financial Developments in South American Countries." This book is the work of William H. Lough, Vice President of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, who has recently traveled through South America for the purpose of studying the financial institutions of the various countries.

The situation as to currency, the money market, the principal banks, and the general condition of business is given in Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Peru, and Uruguay during the last few years.

The effect of the war in Europe especially is dealt with and the measures taken to meet the conditions created by the disturbance of commerce the world over. The book contains up-to-date information as to emergency measures, currency, credit, Government finances, credit extension, and possible changes and reforms in finance in the South American countries.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

Favorable War News Infuses Life Into Day's Dealings.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The buoyancy in New York Saturday and the favorable war news combined to impart a more cheerful tone to the stock market and infused some life into the dealings today. The American was the most active section. Low prices as well as high-priced issues were freely marketed and the closing was firm and near the best.

Japanese bonds, oil shares, home rails, and Colonial bonds were bought with the idea that the present is a favorable time to invest. International Mercantile Marine preferred advanced another 6 points. The war loan was inclined to ease on sales in connection with tomorrow's call.

Money was in good demand in preparation for the payment of the war loan instalment. Discount rates were steady. American exchange was quiet around 4.70%.

Prices Heavy on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 67 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 64½ centimes.

NATIONAL SURETY "MELON."

To Offer Shareholders $1,000,000 Additional Stock at $150.

Directors of the National Surety Company yesterday voted to recommend to stockholders that the capital be increased from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 through the sale of 10,000 new shares to the stockholders at $150 each. This will amount to a "melon cutting" of about $75 in rights on each share of old stock, as the market value of National Surety stock is about $225.

Sale of the stock will give the company $1,500,000 more capital. It is believed the increase was decided on because of the demand for bonds on war contracts, which requires an expansion of the company's working capital to conduct the increased business. President William B. Joyce said a few weeks ago that applications to bond no less than $300,000,000 worth of war material and supplies of other sorts had been made to the company, a sum that has been largely increased since.

PRICE OF OIL UP AGAIN.

Another Advance Made in the Principal Grades of Crude.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 27.—Another advance in the prices of the principal grades of crude oil was announced by the purchasing agencies at the opening of the market today. Pennsylvania crude went up 5 cents a barrel to $1.70. The other advances follow: Cabell, 5 cents to $1.30; Mercer Black and Newcastle, 3 cents to $1.26; Corning, 6 cents to $1.18; Somerset, 4 cents to $1.12. No change was made in Ragland from 65 cents.

LIMA, Ohio, Sept. 27.—Some changes were made here today in the oil market, Princeton and Illinois advancing from $1.09 to $1.12. Pennsylvania and Corning participated in the rise quoted from the East, going to $1.70 and $1.18, respectively, but Mercer Black, Newcastle, Cabell and Somerset ruled firm at Saturday's quotations.

The sensational movements in the "war stocks" overshadowed everything else in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Sharp advances occurred in them with the rise in Baldwin Locomotive the most pronounced. At the start the whole market was strong, influenced in part by the news of a great gain by the Allies on the western battle front. As the session progressed, realizing sales brought about moderate setbacks in some sections of the list, notably among the railroad shares, so that the list of net changes for the day reflected a degree of irregularity at the close.

COREY TAKES OVER MIDVALE'S CONTROL

Steel Company Is Reorganized and the Old Directors Step Out.

PLAN RIVALRY TO SCHWAB

New Organization, Philadelphia Believes, Likely to Assail Bethlehem's Supremacy in Munitions Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The Midvale Steel Company, now in control of a syndicate headed by William Ellis Corey, was this afternoon reorganized with the election of Joseph Entwisle, a young stenographer as President; William P. Barba, former General Manager, as Vice President, and Mr. Corey, Percy A. Rockefeller, and Samuel M. Pryor as Directors. Mr. Entwisle was elected President in order to facilitate the transfer of stock. He will be succeeded by Mr. Corey at the next meeting of the board, which will be held in New York.

A significant move in the reorganization of the corporation was the naming of Mr. Pryor as a Director. He is Vice President of the Remington Arms and Ammunition Company, and a Director in the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the General Motors Company, and the Simmons Hardware Company. He takes an active part in the affairs of these corporations, which have received war material contracts aggregating millions.

Announcement of the election of the new Directors of the Midvale Company was followed by a statement from the new Vice President to the effect that Mr. Pryor's membership on the board did not in any way connect the reorganized corporation with other companies in which he was interested.

"Mr. Pryor is a strong man and one we need in the directorate," said Mr. Barba. "His other affiliations have nothing whatever to do with the reorganization."

When the personnel of the new company was called to the attention of Alba B. Johnson, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, he remarked:

"The election of Mr. Pryor indicates that he is friendly to the interests which have taken over the Midvale Company. He is also a friend of ours. Other than this I cannot explain his election. It in no way involves the two companies."

The reorganization was effected in the offices of William A. Read & Co. Mr. Corey and several New York financiers conferred with Roland L. Taylor, who arranged the deal, from 11 o'clock this morning until 3 o'clock this afternoon. After the final block of stock necessary to give the new owners complete control was transferred the old board met. Charles J. Harrah, founder of the company and chief stockholder, retired as President; James F. Sullivan as Vice President and Charles B. Dunn and Howard Sellers as Directors. Messrs. Harrah and Sullivan also resigned as Directors. Following this formality the Midvale Company was reorganized. Three Directors were named to fill the vacancies and a fourth will be chosen at the next meeting of the board.

At the next meeting of the board, when the Midvale Company will be recapitalized, Mr. Entwisle, the new President, will tender his resignation. Mr. Corey will then be elected to the Presidency, and the Midvale Company will enter the field as a competitor of the Bethlehem Steel Company. It is said that the plant, covering fifty acres at Nicetown, will be the nucleus of a big independent combination.

The present venture of Corey and his associates, Philadelphia believes, is one of a series of moves by financiers friendly to E. P. Morgan & Co. who desire to obtain some of the profits from war contracts, in which Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Company, has had a commanding lead. Ship of the Midvale Company only. Although that the new steel corporation will not be content with the ownership of this plant is one of the biggest independent steel works in Pennsylvania, it is hardly large enough to compete with the Bethlehem Company.

The purchase of the Midvale Company by Corey and interests identified with the Rockefellers is said to be the first move in the formation of a new steel power which will soon be followed by the taking over of the Cambria Steel Company and one or two plants in Western Pennsylvania.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

Some readjustment of cash premiums was in progress in the wheat market yesterday, and as receipts were very heavy at Spring wheat points and promised to increase at Chicago in the near future, there was active liquidation by September longs which resulted in a net loss of 3¼c for that position, while the later months were ¼@⅝c net lower. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat and No. 2 hard were quoted at $1.21, cost, insurance, and freight, New York; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.02½ and No. 1 North Manitoba, 96c, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

Receipts of corn at interior points amounted to over a million bushels yesterday, and as the car lot estimates for Chicago pointed to 830 cars at that point today, there was heavy liquidation in the corn market, and at the close September was 1¾c net lower, while the other positions showed declines of ½@⅔c. The visible supply increased 210,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 765,000 last year. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 80c, prompt shipment.

OATS.

The oats market was only moderately active, but prices were easier in sympathy with wheat and corn, closing at ¼c net lower. Receipts were liberal, and the visible supply increased 1,135,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 310,000 bushels last year. The local cash market was quiet. No. 3 white quoted at 40¼@41c; No. 4 white, 38½@40c; ordinary to fancy clipped, 41@43c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was steady, with prices slightly higher owing to continued light receipts of live hogs in the West and indications of some improvement in the spot demand. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 18,000, estimated for Tuesday, 11,000; Kansas City received 6,000 and Omaha 2,500.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Trading in the market for cottonseed oil was very active, and the total day's business amounted to 53,500 barrels, or one of the largest single day's trading ever recorded. Prices advanced very rapidly during the early operations, at one time showing gains of nearly ½c per pound from the final of Saturday. Toward the close there was a partial reaction, but final prices were 21 to 30 points net higher.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,065 packages. The freight handlers' strike is interfering with the delivery of stock, and the available supply of fine fresh goods was light up to a late hour this morning. The feeling on the whole was rather firm, but reported sales were generally in range of the prices ruling at the close of last week. Fine renovated is doing a little better. Ladies steady. EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 7,709 cases. The scarcity of new laid qualities continues, and any lots coming in appear to large proportion of such are promptly salable, and the market strong and tendency in seller's favor. Good medium qualities are meeting a moderate demand, but more seriously defective fresh gathered eggs are still dragging heavily in competition with storage stock; and there is a considerable accumulation of such in the market for which many prices have to be accepted when buyers can be found at all. Storage eggs in fair demand and held firmly; some further lots are being prepared for export this week. Nearby white eggs scarce, and fancy new laid qualities are hard to find. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 31@32c; extra firsts, 28½@30c; firsts, 26@27c; seconds, 23½@25c; thirds and poorer, 20@23c; dirties, No. 1, 21¼@22½c; No. 2 and poorer, 18@21c; checks, good to choice, dry, 20@21c; culls and inferior, 15@19c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, 25½@26c; firsts, 24@25c; seconds, 22½@23½c; thirds or poorer, 19@22c. THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

East 85th Street Deal for Two Private Dwellings—Times Square Sale—Investors Buy Five Flats in West Bronx—Dr. Wylie Sells and Buys at Rumson.

A deal of more than ordinary interest, in that it contemplates the erection of two high-class private residences in the upper Lenox Hill residential section, near Park Avenue, was the chief feature of an active day in the realty market yesterday. The property sold includes the three private houses at 108 to 110 East Eighty-fifth Street, fronting 55 by 102, being 100 feet west of Park Avenue. They were sold by Leon S. Altmayer for Milton M. Dryfoos.

The name of the buyer was given as A. Brady, but the real name of the purchaser was withheld. Mr. Altmayer said that it was an out-of-town investor who was having plans prepared for two five-story private dwellings, one for himself and the other for his son. Each will cost about $100,000, and among other improvements they will be equipped with elevators, swimming pools, a gymnasium and a roof garden. The combined investment will represent about $300,000. The locality is a choice residential section, the large home of Amos E. R. Pinchot, recently leased by Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, being almost diagonally opposite, on the northeast corner of Park Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street, while on the southeast corner is the new home of Lewis G. Morris, and adjoining the Pinchot house, on Park Avenue, is the large residence of Reginald De Koven.

It was rumored that the site would ultimately be improved with an apartment house. Mr. Altmayer said negotiations had been pending for a resale for such an operation, but it had not been closed and the private house operation had been definitely decided upon.

Sale in Times Square District.

The Times Square section furnished a deal of some importance in the sale of the four three and four-story houses at 240 to 246 West Forty-third Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues. The plot has a frontage of 76.8, about in the middle of the block, on the south side, by 100. The property was sold by the Forty-third Street Associates, composed of A. L. Mordecai & Son, Heilner & Wolf, and Daniel B. Freedman, who acquired it in March, 1914.

The purchasers are the Scheidna Realty Corporation, represented by Stoddard & Mark, as attorneys. No immediate plans for improvement have been made, but it is said that a business structure is contemplated in the near future.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

An investor has purchased from Bayard Dominick, for occupancy, his residence at 22 West Fifty-first Street, a Columbia College leasehold. The structure, which is four stories and basement, occupies a lot 20 by 100.5.

Franklin C. Albee, President of the Wilmore Realty Company, has purchased from the Greenwich Savings Bank, 348 West End Avenue, a four-story private dwelling, 82.4 feet north of Seventy-sixth Street.

Frederick Brown Buys the Kingland.

The Kingland, a six-story apartment house at 515 to 519 West 187th Street, 100 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, has been purchased by Frederick Brown from Virginia Danziger and others. The structure occupies a plot 87.6 by 94.9 feet and was held at $160,000.

Investors Buy Uptown Flats.

James J. Martin has sold to a client of Freidus & Co. 531 and 533 West 145th Street, two five-story flats, each on a plot 33.4 by 100. In part payment the seller took twenty-four lots at Fresh Pond, L. I.

The Charwyn Realty Company, Charles Wynne, President, has bought from Hannah Friedman the five-story double flat, with stores, at 1,462 Fifth Avenue, on lot 25 by 100, adjoining the northwest corner of 118th Street.

Big Deal in West Bronx.

One of the largest deals in the West Bronx section, near the grounds of the New York University, for several months has just been closed in the sale of five new five-story apartment houses on Andrews Avenue, lately completed by the Oesting Building Company, to investors. The houses each cover a plot fronting 75 feet on the avenue, near 179th Street, and all are fully rented.

The respective sales are 1,905 and 1,915 Andrews Avenue to Kete Ley, 1,917 and 1,921 Andrews Avenue to William Dauth, and 1,925 Andrews Avenue to May & Melich. All are cash deals, and the sale disposes of six of seven structures recently built at that point by the Oesting Company, which acquired the land over a year ago at the sale of the Hennessey estate. The builders are now erecting five similar houses in the rear, fronting on Loring Place.

The brokers in the deals were William H. Melich and John P. Dauth. The principals were represented by Adolph & Henry Bloch, attorneys.

American Real Estate Company Sells Eleven Lots.

In the East Bronx the American Real Estate Company has sold six lots on the southeast corner of Daly Avenue and 181st Street to Simon Shapiro of the Simolia Realty Company, who is to improve the plot immediately with two five-story apartment houses, with a frontage of approximately 75 feet.

The company has also sold to Charles Richardson the northeast corner of Vyse Avenue and 181st Street, a plot of five lots, where the improvement to be started immediately will consist of one five-story corner apartment house, with a frontage of 70 feet, and one five-story apartment house occupying the balance of the plot.

Queens Auction Results.

Over 500 persons attended the auction last Saturday at the sale of 298 improved lots on Queens Boulevard, Greenpoint Avenue, Bliss Street, Carolin Street and adjoining streets, Queens, conducted by Bryan L. Kennelly. The lots on Queens Boulevard sold for $3,000 per lot, on Nelson Avenue for $1,700 per lot, on Freeman Avenue for $1,625 per lot, on Bliss Street for $1,500 per lot, and on Carolin Street for $1,425 to $1,525 per lot. About half the lots were sold up to 6:15 o'clock, when it was announced that the company had an advantageous offer at private sale for the remaining lots.

Among the buyers were: Joseph Lippman, E. M. Spier, Victor Johnson, W. S. Smith, V. Lowe, J. S. Leland, G. Brokaw, John Thacker, James Fuller, Harris Means, Edward Schenck W. H. Baum, Edward Tracy, Charles Watson, W. S. Buchanan, and Wesley Winant.

Long Island.

Leon A. Birck of Broadway-Flushing has sold to Harry A. Cochrane, for occupancy an English stucco residence on a large plot on Netherwood Road, Grace Court, Great Neck, for $10,000.

The J. Albert Johntra Company has sold the property on William T. Riley, located at 230 Madison Avenue, Flushing, to William Albrecht of Flushing. The plot is 50 by 148 feet. Improved with a nine-room dwelling. Mr. Albrecht buys for investment.

Dr. Wylie in Big Rumson Deal.

Dr. Walter Gill Wylie's residence, with a large plot on Shrewsbury Avenue, Rumson N. J., has been purchased by Mrs. Stephen G. Williams. The property has a frontage on Shrewsbury Avenue of 271 feet and on the Shrewsbury River of 235 feet, and contains 2¼ acres. It was held at $35,000. Dr. Wylie took in part payment the Seabright ocean front residential property owned by Mrs. Williams, fronting on the ocean 150 feet with a similar frontage on the Shrewsbury River and both sides of Ocean Boulevard. Besides the frame residence there is a garage. It was held at $20,000. Dr. Wylie has just completed a new residence adjoining the property sold to Mrs. Williams.

William H. Hintelman was the broker in the deal, and he has also sold to Dr. Wylie for Henry L. Zobel and Cassell Levy eight plots, about two and a half acres, being part of Riverside Park, fronting 400 feet on Navesink Avenue, 207 feet on Shrewsbury Avenue and 483 feet on Forrest Avenue. The consideration was about $8,000.

New Jersey.

F. L. Brown of Brooklyn has purchased from the Nesbit estate the brick and frame residence on the west side of Orange Road, near Llewellyn Road, in Montclair, N. J. The property, which has a frontage of 112 feet on Orange Road and extends to a depth of 300 feet, has been held at $40,000. The brokers were F. M. Crawley & Brothers.

Factory Sale at New London, Conn.

William A. White & Sons have sold for the Hopson estate the former Hopson & Chapin factory property at New London, Conn., fronting 450 feet on the water, and with a large frontage on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. It is one of the best factory properties in the State, and has been purchased by Raymond & Alexander, lumber merchants. Thomas C. Dillon was associated as broker.

Another Uptown Move.

Cozzens & Pierson have negotiated a lease for a term of ten years, aggregating about $50,000, with James McCurrach & Brother, manufacturers of silk cravats and mufflers, for the eleventh floor of the new Dinsmore Building, now nearing completion, at Thirty-first Street and Fifth Avenue.

For over thirty-six years this firm has been established in the lower Broadway district.

Commercial Leases.

The Cross & Brown Company has rented for the Hecht estate of Boston the store, basement, and sub-basement of 649 and 651 Broadway, containing about 25,000 square feet, to Charles J. Levy, now below Bleecker Street. Bleiman & Co. represented the tenant; Palestine & Siegel, millinery, recently leased similar space at 603 and 605 Broadway, from the Hecht estate. James G. Johnson & Co. occupied these stores for about twenty-five years, and their removal to Thirty-third Street was accepted as an indication that the millinery trade would move to the uptown district.

Frederick Fox & Co. have leased a store in the building corner Broadway and Forty-eighth Street to Paul F. Ferriere.

New Officers of State Association.

The twelfth annual convention of the Real Estate Association of the State of New York concluded at Saratoga Springs last Saturday with the election of the following officers for the coming year: L. D. Woodworth of Rochester, President; Alwyn Ball, Jr. of New York, First Vice President; A. H. Wagg of Malverne, L. I., Second Vice President; Fenton B. Parker of Buffalo, Third Vice President; George S. Horton of Brooklyn, Secretary; Hiram Mintz of Binghamton, Treasurer; M. Morgenthau, Jr. of New York, H. L. Reed of Amsterdam, Ten Eyck T. Mosher, Jr. of Albany, and W. M. Van Duzer of Syracuse, members of the Executive Committee.

The association went on record in favor of a State registration law for real estate brokers and dealers, and also indorsed the new taxation articles proposed by the Constitutional Convention, and appointed a committee to assist in the campaign for its adoption.

Factions of Jewish Women Told They Must Work Together in Care of Immigrants.

SEEK TO ALLAY FRICTION

New York Section of National Council to Reconsider Miss Sadie American's Secession.

Whether the New York Section of the National Council of Jewish Women will secede from the national body will be determined at a meeting of the section to be held some time next week, according to a decision reached yesterday afternoon at a meeting of members of the section in the Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street. The question was made an immediate issue by the action of other members who met on last Wednesday at the call of the President of the section, Miss Sadie American, and voted to secede.

This vote was disputed as not being representative of the sentiment of the New York Section, because the meeting at which it was taken was poorly attended, and ten members of the section opposed to secession called yesterday's meeting for the purpose of registering their opposition to the vote. A communication was received from Miss American in which she said she was willing to have the vote of secession reconsidered at a full meeting of the members of the section. Action was therefore deferred until next week.

A paper issued by the Department of Immigrant Aid, a national board, summarizes the complaints of Miss American's faction as follows:

"That the Department of Immigrant Aid refused to co-operate with the New York Section in immigration work; that the department interfered unduly with and usurped the New York Section's legitimate activities, and that the department by underhand means and the agency of outside parties attempted to bring pressure to bear upon the New York Section and deprived it of much needed income which the New York Section was receiving from outside sources."

The paper in reply to the first two complaints asserts that the charges grew out of the National Board's attempt to introduce a plan for "the proper conduct" of immigration work to supersede the plan of the New York Section, which it characterizes as "insufficient and fragmentary." The "new plan" of the National Board is alleged to be based on co-operation between national and local bodies.

Replying to the third charge that the national body has deprived the New York Section of its income from outside sources, the paper says that when the work of caring for immigrant girls passing through New York was seriously impaired by the refusal of the New York Section to co-operate, the national body appealed to the Immigration Committee of the Baron de Hirsch Fund, "which had for years been giving a subsidy intended to pay the salaries of agents who covered the national no less than the local work at Ellis Island." This subsidy, it is alleged, has been used recently for the salaries of the agents of the New York Section, who, under present conditions, do not co-operate in the national plan.

The Immigration Committee of the fund replied to the National Council's appeal by saying that the Ellis Island agents were supposed to do national as well as local work, and by warning both the national and local bodies that unless the agents did such dual work the subsidy would be withheld after this year.

PUT OVER KINKEAD CASES.

Hearing Adjourned on Charges Against Hoboken Saloon Men.

There was standing room only left in Recorder Carsten's court in Hoboken yesterday morning when the time arrived for Sheriff Eugene F. Kinkead to press charges against the eight saloonkeepers whom he arrested on Sunday on charges of violating the excise law. The Sheriff did not put in an appearance, however, but instead telephoned to Recorder Carsten asking that the cases be put over until Friday morning and the persons arrested be paroled meantime.

As a result of the rigid enforcement of the Sunday closing laws by the Sheriff, Hoboken is nervously awaiting his action today, for the law calls for the closing of saloons on primary day as well as on Sunday.

Sheriff Kinkead in his raid in Bayonne on Sunday arrested the bartender, John Burns, in the saloon owned by Dennis O'Connor, whom the Sheriff attacked in a political speech recently. O'Connor yesterday announced that he intended to sue the Sheriff for $50,000 for defamation of character.

TWO FIREMEN CONVICTED.

Found Guilty of Burglary in a Mercer Street Loft Building.

William Maloney and John S. Ferrick, firemen attached to Hook and Ladder 20, at 155 Mercer Street, were convicted of burglary in the third degree and grand larceny in the second degree before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday. They stole $400 worth of shirtwaist material from a loft at 149 Mercer Street on June 25.

The loft is directly across the street from the firehouse. On the night of the theft there was a fire in the loft, which Maloney and Ferrick are supposed to have started to cover up the larceny. The disappearance of a cutting machine which could not have burned pointed to a burglary. Detectives found the stolen property had been bought by Jacob Mirowitz of 91 Allan Street, who gave them the clue which led to the arrest of the firemen.

WANTS FORD TO CO-OPERATE

Parker Would Develop Submarinette—Has a Man to Build Boat.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 27.—A letter to Henry Ford from Professor Herschel C. Parker of New York, proposing co-operation to develop the idea of the submarinette, was given out for publication today without comment by Mr. Ford's secretaries. The letter, mailed in New York Friday, reads:

"Dear Sir: I have noted your recent indorsement and advocacy of my idea of the 'tiny' submarine, about which I wrote you several months back. I did not quite understand how you could speak of this as your own idea, but note in this morning's paper that your secretary has admitted that the idea originated with me. This being the case, I hope that we may work together, as I feel certain that a boat of the type described is the very kind of defense for the country, and so much better than large battleships, which can be so quickly disposed of through the means of these submarines.

"The plans which were sent to you originally are not supposed to be final, or, indeed, practical plans. I have some valuable ideas to be incorporated in a boat of this kind which I have not thought it well to divulge, believing it rather better to hold these for the Government. I am prepared to submit working plans, and have a boat builder with a convenient plant who would be very glad to furnish the first boat, the motor and other equipment being supplied. These trial boats might be readily tried out on Long Island Sound.

"I applied for a patent some time back, as you know. Will you not let me hear from you, as it is my desire to co-operate in every way toward the efficient defense of our country?"

POLICEMAN GETS HEARING.

Lieut. O'Sullivan Charged with Assault in Gambling Raid.

The hearing of the summons involving an inquiry into charges that Lieutenant Eugene O'Sullivan of the Fifth Inspection District committed an assault when making a raid in Sixth Avenue on the night of July 21 was continued in the Men's Night Court last night before Magistrate Levy.

Timothy Quinn, an electrician, of 188 Hudson Street, testified he was in the place when the raid was made. He said all men were questioned one at a time by O'Sullivan, and that he heard screams coming from a room in which O'Sullivan was interrogating George Nicholson of 145 West Nineteenth Street, who charged O'Sullivan with assaulting him.

All the witnesses admitted they had gone to the place for the purpose of placing bets upon horse races. At the conclusion of the testimony of Nicholson's witnesses the hearing was adjourned to Oct. 13 in the Westchester Court.

LINDEN, N. J., Sept. 27.—The Justice of the Peace of this town, Henry Bunty, who is 91 years old, has been criticised lately on account of the "youthful zeal" with which he imposes fines, and so the announcement was made here today that the Democrats and Republicans had combined to get new blood in the office.

The parties' candidate is Milton C. Louden. He is 90, and was the Recorder here for nearly twenty years. Louden attributes his vigorous old age to the constant use of tobacco since he was in his teens. It has kept away contagious diseases, he says, and he never has had a day of illness.

PLEAS FOR NEW HAVEN MEN.

Six Directors Ask Court for Separate Trial—Case Opens Oct. 13.

Pleading for a separate trial for Lewis Cass Ledyard and Charles M. Pratt on the Sherman law indictment charging them as Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company with having been parties to a combination and conspiracy to restrain interstate trade, De Lancey Nicoll, addressing Judge William H. Hunt in the Federal Court Annex in the Woolworth Building yesterday, insisted that his clients were not conspirators but simply vendors in good faith of the stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad, the purchase of which gave the New Haven control of a competing system.

The argument was also on the motions for a separate trial for Charles F. Brooker, Henry K. McHarg, Frederick F. Brewster, and Alexander Cochrane.

Judge Hunt announced he would give a decision within forty-eight hours and set the New Haven trial peremptorily for Oct. 13.

CONCEALED THEFT FOR YEAR

Friend Betrayed Clerk Who Admits He Stole $1,869 Payroll.

Regarded for five years as one of the most trusted employes in the big silk house of Peirel Buhler & Co. of 280 Fourth Avenue, Henry Schneider, 21 years old, of 454 Forty-second Street, Brooklyn, yesterday confessed that he had robbed his employers on Oct. 16, 1914, of $1,869.60. He had since spent all the money on girls and frivolities. A fellow-employe told of the thefts.

After his confession Schneider was taken before Judge Malone, in General Sessions, and held in $3,000 bail. Schneider also confessed that he had stolen two gold watches from a Mr. Wuest, a member of the silk firm, two years ago.
